the wall street journal columnist and bestselling author of little victories takes a humorous and insightful look at life in the face of overwhelming societal change that we never anticipated from the effects on parenthood marriage friendship work and play to all other aspects of the strange lives we find ourselves living like many of us jason gay didn't see this coming a reshaped world on edge often stuck at home questioning everything trying to navigate a digital landscape that changes how we think parent coach and live with a series of topical and interconnected personal pieces gay comically takes on this new state of being looking for the optimism and joy in the face of discouragement he embarks on a rowdy ride with his son to the daytona 500 weeks before lockdown he confides his hilariously banal texts with his wife he allows his mom to kidnap the family cat from the modest thrills of little league parenting to reckoning with the impending death of a close friend gay's essays run the gamut of modern life and he approaches it all with humility grace and more than a few laughs port describes both the nature and process of protecting appellations of source in japan and provides normative commentary on this protection by focusing on the japanese judiciary's interpretation of two statutes the trademark law and the unfair competition prevention act some important lessons are learned first the japanese judiciary treats trademark owners both foreign and domestic paternalistically japanese courts go to great extremes to avoid harsh results that seem possible under a strict reading of these two statutes second japanese trademark owners are extremely rights conscious and pursue litigation to the fullest in order to drive up the cost of market access by competitors third the japanese trademark right operates more like a true property right than it does in america this has broad ramifications as judges treat the right with far more deference than their american counterparts finally this book shows the very broad scope of trademark protection in japan a research bulletin examining the japanese automotive industry s impact worldwide
