all too frequently the largest effective barrier to interdisciplinary communication is jargon the symposium whose proceedings appear in the following pages sought of course to eliminate unnecessary and obscurantist jargon but it sought also to do something far more ambitious to confront the intellectual issues that are attached to the use of the word evaluation in medicine and health services to this end a carefully selected group of experts in medicine epidemiology and health economics was invited to present papers they were selected for their reputations either as conceptualizers or as empirical evaluators or the rarest breed of expert as both the context was to be empirical three procedures were selected that had been subject to evaluation but that posed rather different types of problem the first was the treatment of renal failure by dialysis of various kinds this has a relatively long history of evaluation with a large literature and particularly raises broad policy issues within the health services of western societies as to the size of programmes to be provided the type location and mix of treatments the selection of patients to receive treatment and the measurement of the success of various strategies the second was the treatment of duodenal ulcer by a new species of drug the histamine H₂ receptor antagonists specifically cimetidine diverse driving forces processes and actors are responsible for different trends in the development of megacities and large urban areas under the dynamics of global change megacities are themselves changing on the one hand they are prone to increasing socioeconomic vulnerability due to pronounced poverty sociospatial and political fragmentation sometimes with extreme forms of segregation disparities and conflicts on the other hand megacities offer positive potential for global transformation e.g. minimisation of space consumption highly effective use of resources efficient disaster prevention and health care options if good strategies were developed at present in many megacities and urban areas of the developing world and the emerging economies the quality of life is eroding most of the megacities have grown to unprecedented size and the pace of urbanisation has far exceeded the growth of the necessary infrastructure and services as a result an increasing number of urban dwellers are left without access to basic amenities like clean drinking water fresh air and safe food additionally social inequalities lead to subsequent and significant intra urban health inequalities and unbalanced disease burdens that can trigger conflict and violence between subpopulations the guiding idea of our book lies in a multi and interdisciplinary approach to the complex topic of megacities and urban health that can only be adequately understood when different disciplines share their knowledge and methodological tools to work together we hope that the book will allow readers to deepen their understanding of the complex dynamics of urban and megacity populations through the lens of public health geographical and other research perspectives
