all who have read Òrobinson crusoeÓ and who has not will remember the circumstance of his opening some time after he had become domiciled on his desolate island one of the chests that had come to him from the ship in it he found pins needles and thread a pair of large scissors Òten or a dozen good knives Ó some cloth about a dozen and a half of white linen handkerchiefs concerning which he remarks Òthey were exceedingly refreshing to wipe my face on a warm day Ó and finally hidden away in the till of the chest Òthree great bags of moneyÑgold as well as silver Ó the finding of all these articlesÑthe money exceptedÑit will be further remembered greatly delighted the heart of crusoe inasmuch as they increased his store of useful things and therefore increased his comfort and happiness but in respect to the money the case was entirely different it was a thing to him under the circumstances absolutely worthless and over its presence and finding he soliloquized as follows Òi smiled at myself at the sight of all this money Ôoh drug Ó said i aloud Ôwhat art thou good for thou art not worth to me no not the taking off the ground one of these knives is worth all this heap nay i would give it all for a gross of tobacco pipes for sixpenny worth of turnip and carrot seed from england or for a handful of pease and beans and a bottle of ink ÓÓ in introducing this episode in the life of his hero nothing was probably further from the thought of the author de foe than the intent to give his readers a lesson in political economy and yet it would be difficult to find an illustration which conveys in so simple a manner to him who reflects upon it so much of information in respect to the nature of that which is popularly termed Òwealth Ó or so good a basis for reasoning correctly in respect to the origin and function of that which we call Òmoney Ó and in such reasoning the truth of the following propositions is too evident to require demonstration 1st the pins and needles the scissors knives and cloth were of great utility to robinson crusoe because their possession satisfied a great desire on his part to have them and greatly increased his comfort and happiness 2d possessing utility they nevertheless possessed no exchangeable value because they could not be bought or sold or what is the same thing exchanged with any body for any thing 3d they had moreover no price for they had no purchasing power which could be expressed as money 4th the money which is popularly regarded as the symbol and the concentration of all wealth had under the circumstances neither utility value nor price it could not be eaten drunk worn used as a tool or exchanged with any body for any thing and fully merited the appellation which crusoe in another place gives it of Òsorry worthless stuffÓ finally the pins needles knives cloth and scissors were all capital to robinson crusoe because they were all instrumentalities capable of being used to produce something additional to him useful or desirable the money was not capital under the circumstances because it could not be used to produce any thing starting then with a condition of things on the island in which money had clearly neither utility nor value let us next consider under what change of domestic circumstances it could become useful acquire value become an object of exchange and constitute a standard for establishing prices
