In recent years three of the main sites of liberation struggle in the world: Palestine, El Salvador and South Africa appear to have been transformed into arenas of negotiation and peace processes. Talk of revolution, violence and state repression has been replaced by the promise or its lack of truth commissions, reconciliation, amnesties. Barbara Harlow, in this powerful and passionate study, examines this change through the prism of political assassination. Ghassan Kanafani, Roque Dalton and Ruth First, all of whom laboured on behalf of social revolutions they did not see, are case studies in her exploration of the intricate relations between politically engaged, imaginative writing and participation in revolutionary struggle. The stories of their lives and deaths illustrate the causes and circumstances of political assassination and provoke reflection on the wave of self-questioning currently engaging the PLO, the FMLN and the ANC. In a moving consideration of the complex tensions that motivate and condition political writing, After Lives explores the costs and gains that accrue to writers who put their works and their lives on the line.

This volume analyzes the evolution and cultivation of modern Palestinian collective memory and its role in shaping Palestinian national identity from its inception in the 1920s to the 2006 Palestinian elections.

This book is the first anthropological study of suicide in the Arab world. Today it discusses the effects of life under Israeli occupation on the mental health of young Palestinians using selected case studies of men and women who have attempted suicide in the west bank above all in the city of ramallah but also in jenin the book is not about martyrs or those who gain so much media attention by dying for a holy cause rather it concerns those who wish to die for entirely private reasons contrary to what might be expected fatal suicide levels in palestinian society remain low compared with western norms despite the many stress factors that have been shown to contribute to suicidal behavior in the west including unemployment and social deprivation in particular suicide is found to be contrary to the concept of palestinian identity of a people under siege for whom resistance is paramount rather than giving in to depression or despair above all nadia dabbagh s findings confirm the importance of what she calls the ripple effects of war her research was carried out after the first intifada during a so called peace building period but it clearly reveals the trauma suffered by palestinians living in the occupied territories the stories she tells mirror the disillusionment of those who had hoped that their lives would improve once fighting subsided and the palestinian national authority had been established the book aims to foster an understanding of suicide in the islamic world more generally looking at current and historical attitudes to death and self killing in islamic and arab thought the distinction between suicide and martyrdom is explored in detail as are current perceptions of these phenomena in the muslim world book jacket
