in the late 1930s a number of american women especially those allied with various peace and isolationist groups protested against the nation s entry into world war ii while their story is fairly well known margaret paton walsh reveals a far less familiar story of women who fervently felt that american intervention was absolutely necessary paton walsh recounts how the united states became involved in the war but does so through the eyes of american women who faced it as a necessary evil covering the period between 1935 and 1941 she examines how these women functioned as political actors even though they were excluded from positions of power through activism in women s organizations informal women s networks and even male dominated lobbying groups in the great debate over whether america should enter the war some women favored aid to the allies not because they hoped for war but because they hoped aid would forestall more direct u s involvement but also because they believed war was preferable to a nazi victory paton walsh shows that this activism involved some of the most prominent women of their day elizabeth cutter morrow whose son in law charles lindbergh was an isolationist spokesman supported the revision of the neutrality acts to allow the sale of arms to the allies and expressed her support in a national radio broadcast soon other women joined this debate esther brunauer of the aaup journalist dorothy thompson and organizations like the league of women voters and national women s trade union league broke from the pacifist tradition to advocate american aid for the allied cause focusing on the conflict in europe paton walsh shows how these women grasped the implications of the lend lease program for america s entry into the war but supported it nevertheless by late 1941 the women s division of the fight for freedom committee had been established no longer merely advocating aid to britain to keep american boys out of battle this organization supported direct american involvement in the war as a means of stopping nazi oppression while most historians have focused on women s pacifism paton walsh connects women more directly to world events and shows how those interventionists reformulated maternalist ideas to justify and explain their beliefs our war too is a story of american women trying to reconcile the irreconcilable to preserve both their principles and their peace it expands our understanding of women as political actors and thinkers about foreign policy as it sheds new light on american public opinion over the build up to the war ever since the dramatic airlifting of all 67 tonnes of india s gold from the reserve bank of india to the vaults of british and swiss banks in may 1991 as collateral for a 2 2 billion emergency loan india has never been the same the new economic policy nep which followed two months later and has been pursued with varying degrees of commitment by later governments heralded a new chapter in india s history in indians in a globalizing world acclaimed journalist and historian dilip hiro shows that the redistribution of the extra wealth created by the spurt in growth caused by economic liberalization has been skewed grossly favouring those who are already well off the author of inside india today a modern classic described as the best book on india by the guardian hiro seamlessly combines research with grassroots reporting in his riveting narrative he moves from glitzy office tower blocks and prohibitively expensive apartments in the gated enclaves of gurgaon the poster city of new india to the embattled maoist stronghold of dantewada in chhattisgarh he is as much at ease narrating the tales of the great and good in california s silicon valley as he is in outlining the lifestyle of the residents of delhi s new seelampur or dehradun s bindal river slum above all he shows how life in rural india home to seven out of ten indians has been affected by globalization only a tiny minority of villages near urban centres have prospered because of rapid urbanization while the vast majority have stagnated or fallen behind finally indians in a globalizing world explains how accelerated urbanization and financial globalization have led to an explosive growth in corruption which emerged as the primary concern of voters in the 2014 general election
