scepticism is as much the result of knowledge as knowledge is of scepticism to be content with what we at present know is for the most part to shut our ears against conviction since from the very gradual character of our education we must continually forget and emancipate ourselves from knowledge previously acquired we must set aside old notions and embrace fresh ones and as we learn we must be daily unlearning something which it has cost us no small labour and anxiety to acquire and this difficulty attaches itself more closely to an age in which progress has gained a strong ascendancy over prejudice and in which persons and things are day by day finding their real level in lieu of their conventional value the same principles which have swept away traditional abuses and which are making rapid havoc among the revenues of sinecurists and stripping the thin tawdry veil from attractive superstitions are working as actively in literature as in society the credulity of one writer or the partiality of another finds as powerful a touchstone and as wholesome a chastisement in the healthy scepticism of a temperate class of antagonists as the dreams of conservatism or the impostures of pluralist sinecures in the church history and tradition whether of ancient or comparatively recent times are subjected to very different handling from that which the indulgence or credulity of former ages could allow mere statements are jealously watched and the motives of the writer form as important an ingredient in the analysis or his history as the facts he records probability is a powerful and troublesome test and it is by this troublesome standard that a large portion of historical evidence is sifted consistency is no less pertinacious and exacting in its demands in brief to write a history we must know more than mere facts human nature viewed under an introduction of extended experience is the best help to the criticism of human history historical characters can only be estimated by the standard which human experience whether actual or traditionary has furnished to form correct views of individuals we must regard them as forming parts of a great whole we must measure them by their relation to the mass of beings by whom they are surrounded and in contemplating the incidents in their lives or condition which tradition has handed down to us we must rather consider the general bearing of the whole narrative than the respective probability of its details for those exhausted by the highly charged debates and polarized climate of literary studies today annabel patterson's reading between the lines offers a strategic compromise a moderate stance between the radical opponents and the zealous protectors of the traditional western canon she reconsiders the value of reading the white male canonical writers of antiquity and of early modern england finding in them a set of values different from those supposed by both sides in the great books quarrel rather than being the unthinking or deliberate promoters of political or cultural uniformity these writers subjected such conventional notions to critical scrutiny and even promoted alternatives the key to this revisionary argument is reading between the lines a strategy usually associated with the eccentric conservatism of leo strauss but which patterson shows is not only implicit in all acts of interpretation but played a particularly important role in an age when writing between the lines was often essential for the writer's survival patterson argues that if we learn how to read those old and seemingly alien texts which themselves responded to rapid and unsettling change in the arenas of religion politics and education they have much that is liberating to tell us about our own expanding culture including the importance of republican constitutionalism freedom of speech and civic and religious toleration this salutary redefinition of humanism arises from patterson's essays on plato spenser shakespeare donne and milton but the book also deals with the gendered topics of rape and divorce and with popular culture in the sixteenth century and today these interests are not on opposite sides of some theoretical boundary but as patterson demonstrates from contemporary novels by joseph heller and nancy price interdependent
