for centuries humanity has believed that hell is a place of fire and brimstone a realm of eternal torment separate from earth but what if everything we were taught was wrong what if hell isn't a burning abyss but the very world we inhabit earth itself a prison for lost souls sealed under an impenetrable dome father edward ward a devoted catholic priest and scholar stumbles upon an ancient forbidden text known as the missing god notes while studying at a secluded monastery the book challenges everything he knows claiming that god did not create hell as a place of torment but instead chose earth as a domain for lost and unworthy souls both human and fallen angels to evolve and prove their worth before entering heaven intrigued and disturbed edward becomes obsessed with proving or disproving the claim determined to uncover the truth he embarks on a perilous journey to a tibetan monastery with fellow priest ezra brown where another sacred text god's notes is rumored to hold divine revelations but their journey is plagued by misfortunes a cryptic warning from a stranger violent storms theft and near death experiences it seems as though unseen forces are determined to keep them from their destination upon finally reaching the monastery edward discovers the long lost text that confirms his worst fears earth is indeed the realm where souls are confined the dome above is not just metaphorical it is divine containment preventing escape until one earns the right to ascend but this revelation leads to an even deeper question if god is love why would he imprison his own creations and more importantly can anyone truly escape edward's faith is tested as he seeks the final answer is humanity condemned to this eternal prison or is there a way out beyond the dome
