this book examines the popular bases of communist influence in Italy focusing on the struggle between the Catholic Church and the Communist Party for the allegiance of the Italian people the author details the ways in which the citizens resolve the central paradox of Italy which lies in its being the home both of the Vatican and of the largest Communist Party of any non-Communist nation he discusses the local structure of the party including its many allied organisations and the nature of participation in party affairs and stresses its role in local social life in this study professor Kertzer draws upon the experiences and observations of a year spent in a working class quarter of Bologna the capital of Italian Communism while the national Communist Party calls for conciliation with the church there is an ancient tradition of anti-clericalism in this area moreover the official church position excludes the possibility of people being both Catholic and Communist the implications of this situation for local level tactics of church and party and how people divide their allegiances between the competing claims form the primary theme of the book seminar paper from the year 2012 in the subject theology historic theology ecclesiastical history grade 1 0 trinity college dublin irish school of ecumenics course fluid religion and orthodoxy language english abstract not only historically speaking but also from a religious point of view the communist era is an interesting and highly influential period of time for eastern europe and the rest of the world this age has significantly changed the relationship between church and state in eastern europe and russia from a balanced condition to a rather hostile and combating relation the reason for this is not only the unconditional adoption of the marxist ideal of atheism but primarily a struggle of powers in the communist era religion was perceived as a disturbing factor regarding the political system and the communist government felt questioned and weakened by the influence and authority of the ecclesial institution hence one of the main aims was to weaken and minimize the churches impact on society however there are two questions that arise within the analysis of the relationship between church and state during the communist era the first question is culturally related and queries the equality of the relation in every eastern european country and russia however since it would be far too complex to answer the inquiry whether every eastern european government treated the churches the same way or at least similarly in this essay i am going to focus on a specific eastern european country hence i am going to analyze the situation in a country which is especially exemplary for the effects of the communist regime namely romania the second question related to this analysis is whether the relationship between state and church can be defined holistically by referring to the term church in general was the relationship between the state and the romanian orthodox church as the national church similar to the relation between the state and smaller churches since sabrina petra ramet pointed out the protestant churches were more troublesome for the communists than the orthodox church or catholic church therefore i consider it most interesting to compare the ecclesial situations of the orthodox church and the protestant churches in romania during the communist era and under the communist regime the present volume focuses on the relationship with communism of romania s most important religious denominations and their attempt to cope with that difficult past which continues to cast an important shadow over their present for the first time ever this volume considers both the majority romanian orthodox church and significant minority denominations such as the roman and greek catholic churches the reformed church the hungarian unitarian church and the pentecostal christian denomination it argues that no religious group escaped collaboration with the communists after 1989 however most denominations had little desire to tackle their tainted past and make a clean start in part this situation was facilitated by the country s deficient legislation that did not encourage the pursuit of lustration which in turn did not lead to a serious movement of elite renewal in the religious realm instead a strong process of reproduction of the old elites and their adaptation to democracy has been the dominant characteristic of the post communist period
