the life story domains of identity and personality development in emerging adulthood focuses on individuals formulations of the unique episodes of their lives that give us meaning and a sense of personal identity

recently the lives of people from age 18 to 29 have changed so dramatically that a new stage of life has developed emerging adulthood that is distinct from both the adolescence that precedes it and the young adulthood that comes in its wake rather than marrying and becoming parents in their early twenties most people in industrialized societies now postpone these transitions until at least their late twenties and instead spend the time in self focused exploration as they try out different possibilities in their careers and relationships in emerging adulthood jeffrey jensen arnett identifies and labels for the first time this period exploration instability possibility self focus and a sustained sense of being in limbo an increasing number of emerging adults emphasize having meaningful and satisfying work to a degree not seen in prior generations marrying later and exploring more casual sexual relationships have created different hopes and fears concerning long term commitments and the differences between love and sex emerging adults also face the challenge of defending their non traditional lifestyles to parents and others outside their generation who have made much more traditional choices in contrast to previous portrayals of the transition from adolescence to adulthood has undergone significant changes in recent decades unlike a half century ago when young people in industrialized countries moved from adolescence into young adulthood in relatively short order at around age 20 now the decade from the late teens to the late twenties is seen as an extended time of self focused exploration and education in pursuit of optimally fulfilling relationships and careers recognition of this new period is stronger than ever but an important question remains should emerging adulthood be considered a developmental stage or a process in debating emerging adulthood stage or process two pairs of developmental psychologists take sides in a debate that is central to the very concept of emerging adulthood arnett and tanner argue that as young people around the world share demographic similarities such as longer education and later marriage the years between the ages 18 and 25 are best understood as entailing a new life stage however because the experiences of emerging adults worldwide vary according to cultural context educational attainment and social class these two scholars suggest that there may not be one but many different emerging adulthoods an important issue for this burgeoning area of inquiry is to explore and describe this variation in contrast hendry and kloop assert that stage theories have never been able to explain individual transitions across the life course in their view stage theories including the theory of emerging adulthood ought to be abolished altogether and explanations found for the processes and mechanisms that govern human change at any age this engaging book maps out the argument of stage or process in detail with vigorous disagreements conflicting alternatives and some leavening humor ultimately even finding some common ground debating emerging adulthood is an absolute must read for developmental psychologists as well as anyone interested in this indisputably important time of life in recent years fewer young people make a smooth and linear transition to adulthood the age of marriage has increased and the lives of many young people are characterized by instabilities in both their careers and their romantic lives these changes have been conceptualized as an extension of adolescence with some arguing that this reflects the increased narcissism and self absorption of generation me however when approaching the age of 30 the vast majority of young people are likely to have settled down more than eighty percent have started a career or have a steady job oecd 2022 and more than two thirds are married or involved in a stable and intimate romantic relationship u s census bureau 2021
