finite mixture distributions are a weighted average of a finite number of distributions the latter are usually called the mixture components the weights are usually described by a multinomial distribution and are sometimes called mixing proportions the mixture components may be the same type of distributions with different parameter values but they may also be completely different distributions therefore finite mixture distributions are very flexible for modeling data they are frequently used as a building block within many modern econometric models the specification of the mixture distribution depends on the modeling problem at hand in this thesis we introduce new applications of finite mixtures to deal with several different modeling issues each chapter of the thesis focusses on a specific modeling issue the parameters of some of the resulting models can be estimated using standard techniques but for some of the chapters we need to develop new estimation and inference methods to illustrate how the methods can be applied we analyze at least one empirical data set for each approach these data sets cover a wide range of research fields such as macroeconomics marketing and political science we show the usefulness of the methods and in some cases the improvement over previous methods in the literature
