this persuasive book analyses the complex often violent connections between body and voice in ovid s metamorphoses and narrative lyric and dramatic works by petrarch marston and shakespeare lynn enterline describes the foundational yet often disruptive force that ovidian rhetoric exerts on early modern poetry particularly on representations of the self the body and erotic life paying close attention to the trope of the female voice in the metamorphoses as well as early modern attempts at transgendered ventriloquism that are indebted to ovid s work she argues that ovid s rhetoric of the body profoundly challenges renaissance representations of authorship as well as conceptions about the difference between male and female experience this vividly original book makes a vital contribution to the study of ovid s presence in renaissance literature the fourth volume of the collected papers of the icla congress the many languages of comparative literature includes articles that study thematic and formal elements of literary texts although the question of prioritizing either the level of content or that of form has often provoked controversies most contributions here treat them as internally connected while theoretical considerations inform many of the readings the main interest of most articles can be described as rhetorical in the widest sense given that the ancient discipline of rhetoric did not only include the study of rhetorical figures and tropes such as metaphor irony or satire but also that of topoi which were originally viewed as the places where certain arguments could be found but later came to represent the arguments or intellectual themes themselves another feature shared by most of the articles is the tendency of undeclared thematology which not only reflects the persistence of the charge of positivism but also shows that most scholars prefer to locate themselves within more specific often interdisciplinary fields of literary study in this sense this volume does not only prove the ongoing relevance of traditional fields such as rhetoric and thematology but provides contributions to currently flourishing research areas among them literary multilingualism literature and emotions and ecocriticism
