first published in 2004 the mongols are one of the great peoples in the history of high asia their name has been familiar over the whole of the old world for close on eight hundred years yet at the most generous estimate it would be anachronistic to speak of a mongol state in the modern sense of the word as existing before the end of 1911 the imperial adventure under genghis khan and his successors left the mongols exhausted and disunited politically and in the seventeenth century they fell piecemeal under manchu domination which continued for over two hundred years this study looks at the mongol society as it was during the comparatively static two centuries between the final submission to the manchus in 1691 and the national revolution of 1911 the second part of the book describes the dynamic course of events since that revolution and more especially since the second soviet inspired revolution which began in 1921 originally a promotional booklet first published in 1907 this work describes the genesis and publication of the cambridge modern history many authors who discuss the idea of globalization see it as continuing pre established paths of development of modern societies post modernist writers by contrast have lost sight of the importance of historical narrative altogether martin albrow argues that neither group is able to recognize the new era which stares us in the face a history of the present needs an explicit epochal theory to understand the transition to the global age when globality displaces modernity there is a general decentering of state government economy culture and community albrow calls for a recasting of the theory of such institutions and the relations between them he finds an open potential for society to recover its abiding significance in the face of the declining nation state at the same time a new kind of citizenship is emerging this important book will provoke both radicals and conservatives its scholarship ranges widely across the social sciences and humanities it is bound to promote wide cross disciplinary debate
