FAQs:

1. What if I can't find the answer in the textbook? If you can't find a direct answer, look for related concepts and information that will help you infer the answer logically. You can also consult additional resources like reputable online encyclopedias or historical websites. Always cite your sources if using outside materials.
2. How much detail should I include in my answers? Your answers should be concise but thorough enough to fully address the question. Avoid overly lengthy responses but ensure you include all necessary information to demonstrate your understanding.
3. What if I'm unsure of the correct answer? If you're unsure, make your best educated guess based on the information available. It's better to attempt an answer than to leave it blank. Try to eliminate clearly incorrect options if it's a multiple-choice question.
4. Are there different types of questions in this section? Yes, likely. Expect multiple-choice, true/false, short-answer, and potentially essay questions, each requiring a different approach. Short-answer questions typically demand brief factual answers while essays require more detailed analysis and explanation.
5. How can I improve my overall understanding of the chapter? Beyond the review questions, actively engage with the chapter material. Create timelines, mind maps, or flashcards to reinforce key concepts and events. Discuss the chapter content with classmates or your teacher to gain further insights and clarify any uncertainties. Remember, consistent effort and active learning are key to success.

This book comprises contributions by leading experts in the field of international humanitarian law on the subject of the categorisation or classification of armed conflict. It is divided into two sections: the first aims to provide the reader with a sound understanding of the legal questions surrounding the classification of hostilities and its consequences the second includes ten case studies that examine practice in respect of classification understanding how classification operates in theory and practice is a precursor to identifying the relevant rules that govern parties to hostilities with changing forms of armed conflict which may involve multi national operations transnational armed groups and organized criminal gangs the need for clarity of the law is all important the case studies selected for analysis are northern ireland drc colombia afghanistan from 2001 gaza south ossetia iraq from 2003 lebanon 2006 the so called war against al qaeda and future trends the studies explore the legal consequences of classification particularly in respect of the use of force detention in armed conflict and the relationship between human rights law and international humanitarian law the practice identified in the case studies allows the final chapter to draw conclusions as to the state of the law on classification in recent years a number of criminal tribunals have been established to investigate prosecute and try individuals accused of serious violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law these tribunals have been described as hybrid or internationalised tribunals as their structure and applicable law consist of both international and national elements six such tribunals are currently in operation the special court for sierra leone the extraordinary chambers in the courts of cambodia the international judges and prosecutors programme in kosovo the war crimes chamber for bosnia and herzegovina the iraqi high tribunal and the special tribunal for lebanon the special panels for serious crimes in east timor suspended operation in may 2005 although there continues to be some international involvement in investigation and prosecution of serious crimes suggestions have also been made that this model of tribunal would be appropriate for the prosecution of atrocities committed in among others burundi the sudan the democratic republic of congo kenya and liberia as well as for a wider range of international crimes most recently piracy the key aims of this book are to place the model of hybrid and internationalised tribunals in the context of other mechanisms to try international crimes to examine the increasing demand for the establishment of hybrid and internationalised judicial institutions and the factors driving such demand to define the category of hybrid and internationalised tribunals by examining the key features of the existing and proposed hybrid or internationalised tribunals as well as the features of those institutions with international elements that are generally excluded from this category to determine the legal and jurisdictional bases of existing hybrid and internationalised tribunals to analyse how the legal and jurisdictional basis of a tribunal affects other issues such as the applicable law the application of amnesties and immunities and the relationship of the tribunal with the host state third states national courts and other international criminal tribunals the book concentrates on the definitional legal and jurisdictional aspects of hybrid and internationalised criminal tribunals as this has been the subject of some confusion in arguments before the tribunals and in the judgments of the tribunals in its concluding section the book examines the future role of internationalised and hybrid criminal tribunals particularly in light of the establishment of the icc and the potential use of such tribunals in other contexts it also assesses how hybrid and internationalised tribunals fit into a multi layered framework of international criminal law and transitional justice

this book is about the delivery of family justice in england and wales focusing on the work of the family judiciary in the lower courts the policy context is moving so rapidly that the authors have gone beyond presenting their empirical findings to offer a broader consideration of the nature and role of the family justice system as these are in danger of being lost amid present reform proposals the first four chapters are historical and comparative examining assumptions about family justice and offering a defence of the role of legal rights in family life and the importance of good policy making balancing outcome and behaviour focused approaches to family justice comparative examples from the us and australia show how new approaches to family justice can be successfully deployed the next three chapters are empirical including a typology of the roles played and tasks addressed by the judges overturning the commonly held assumption that the central judicial role is adjudication emphasising the extent to which judges integrate outcome and behaviour focused approaches to family justice and giving a detailed account of the daily work of circuit and district judges and legal advisers the conclusion is that there is a trend across jurisdictions driven by technological innovation and by economic constraints to reduce the role of courts and lawyers in favour of individual choices based on private or government funded information sources while these developments can be beneficial they also have dangers and limitations the final chapter argues that despite the move to privatised forms of dispute resolution family justice still demands a sound judicial structure
