there is an odd contradiction at the heart of language and culture learning language and culture are so to speak two sides of a single coin language reflects the thinking values and worldview of its speakers despite this there is a persistent split between language and culture in the classroom foreign language pedagogy is often conceptualized in terms of gaining knowledge and practicing skills while cultural learning goals are often conceptualized in abstract terms such as awareness or criticality this book helps resolve this dilemma informed by brain and mind sciences its core message is that language and culture learning can both be seen as a single interrelated process the embodiment of dynamic systems of meaning into the intuitive mind this deep learning process is detailed in the form of the developmental model of linguaculture learning dml grounded in dynamic skill theory the dml describes four developmental levels of language and culture learning which represents a subtle yet important shift in language and culture pedagogy rather than asking how to add culture into language education we should be seeking ways to make language and culture learning deeper more integrated embodied experiential and transformational this book provides a theoretical approach including practical examples for doing so resources students use in their varied communities of belonging needs to be acknowledged and students need to be encouraged to call on these to the fullest extent possible in the course of learning what they are being taught in the writing classroom pedagogically this book provides educators with the rhetorical discursive and literacy tools needed to implement this approach the book presents a new theory of the relationship between language and culture in a transnational and global perspective the fundamental view is that languages spread across cultures and cultures spread across languages or in other words that linguistic and cultural practices flow through social networks in the world along partially different paths and across national structures and communities
