Understanding Learned Helplessness The Roots of Resignation

Learned helplessness isn't inherent it's learned It's a consequence of repeated exposure to uncontrollable negative events Imagine a dog repeatedly receiving electric shocks with no way to escape Initially the dog will attempt to avoid the shock But after repeated failures it stops trying even when an escape route is provided This passivity is learned helplessness In humans this can manifest through various adverse experiences including Trauma Abuse neglect prolonged illness or significant loss can create a pervasive sense of powerlessness Chronic Stress Constant pressure from work relationships or finances can erode a person's sense of agency Repeated Failures Consistently failing to achieve goals whether academic professional or personal can lead to a belief that effort is futile Negative SelfTalk Internalizing criticism and negative selfperceptions further reinforces the belief in one's inability to succeed

- 4 Seeking Support Lean on your support network friends family therapists Talking about your experiences and feelings can help you process them and gain a fresh perspective Professional therapy can provide specialized tools and strategies for overcoming learned helplessness
- 5 Practicing SelfCompassion Be kind to yourself Recognize that setbacks are a normal part of life and dont define your worth Treat yourself with the same empathy and understanding you would offer a friend in a similar situation
- 6 Building Resilience Resilience is the ability to bounce back from adversity Cultivate it by engaging in activities that promote wellbeing such as exercise healthy eating sufficient sleep and engaging in hobbies

Analogies for Understanding
