can be found in Cerro Gordo which the author calls California's best true ghost town. Seasoned back roads traveler Philip Varney, who has visited nearly a hundred ghost towns in the area, provides a down-to-earth and helpful guide to more than sixty of the best in southern California and nearby Inyo and Kern counties. He defines a ghost town as a town with a population markedly decreased from its peak, one whose initial reason for settlement no longer keeps people there. It can be completely deserted, have a resident or two, or retain genuine signs of vitality. But Varney has eliminated those towns he considers either too populated or too empty of significant remains. The sites are grouped in four chapters: Inyo County, Death Valley, the Mojave Desert, and Kern River and the regions surrounding Los Angeles and San Diego. Each chapter provides a map of the region, a ranking of sites as major, secondary, and minor, information on road conditions, trip suggestions, and tips on the use of particular topographic maps for readers interested in more detailed exploration. Each entry includes directions to a town, a brief history of that town, and notes on its special points of interest. Current photographs provide a valuable record of the sometimes fragile sites. Southern California's best ghost towns will be welcomed both by those who enjoy traveling off the beaten path and by those who enjoy the history of the American West.

Drawing on the underrepresentation of the global south in global knowledge production with a focus on the existing inequalities, the book highlights the importance of postcolonial narratives within global southern epistemologies. In English language teaching (ELT) and teaching English to speakers of other languages (TESOL), chapters consider the epistemological landscapes of these fields, their dedication to English teaching and English-related topics, and the intersection of the coloniality of language and the supremacy of English worldwide. The book explores the type of discussion that is needed to advance a more nuanced understanding of sociopolitical circumstances and how they shape our academic practices and theorizations of ELT and TESOL. In doing so, chapters examine the current geopolitics of knowledge that are found in journal publishing, citing how it favours the global north, and further exploring ways of decolonizing language practices, teaching approaches, and research cultures, calling for greater visibility and recognition of southern ways of knowing within ELT and TESOL practice and research. The book will be an essential reading for scholars, researchers, and students of TESOL, ELT, applied linguistics, and multilingualism.

This volume gathers personal recollections by fifteen eminent historians of the American South, coming from distinctive backgrounds, traveling diverse career paths, and practicing different kinds of history the contributors exemplify the field's richness on many levels as they reflect on why they joined the profession and chose their particular research specialties these historians write eloquently of family and upbringing teachers and mentors defining events and serendipitous opportunities the struggle for civil rights was the defining experience for several contributors peter h wood remembers how black fans of the st louis cardinals erupted in applause for the dodgers jackie robinson i realized for the first time writes wood that there must be something even bigger than hometown loyalties dividing americans gender equality is another frequent concern in the essays anne firor scott tells of her advisor's ridicule when childbirth twice delayed scott's dissertation with great effort i managed to write two chapters but professor handlin was moved to inquire whether i planned to have a baby every chapter yet another prominent theme is the reconciliation of the professional and the personal as when bill c malone traces his scholarly interests back to the memories of growing up poor on an east texas cotton farm and finding escape and diversion in the sounds of hillbilly music always candid and often witty each essay is a road map through the intellectual terrain of southern history as practiced during the last half of the twentieth century during the civil war some confederates sought to prove the distinctiveness of the southern people and to legitimate their desire for a separate national existence through the creation of a uniquely southern literature and culture michael bernath follows the activities of a group of southern writers thinkers editors publishers educators and ministers whom he labels confederate cultural nationalists in order to trace the rise and fall of a cultural movement dedicated to liberating the south from its longtime dependence on northern books periodicals and teachers by analyzing the motives driving the struggle for confederate intellectual independence by charting its wartime accomplishments and by assessing its failures bernath makes provocative arguments about the nature of confederate nationalism life within the confederacy and the perception of southern cultural distinctiveness flashes of a southern spirit explores meanings of the spirit in the american south including religious ecstasy and celebrations of regional character and distinctiveness south africa is awash with policy failures and policy confusion we argue firstly that our current discord over policy details has its origin in the celebrated negotiated transition we hold that the vote count of an 85 majority in the constituent assembly in 1996 obscured the reality that the constitution meant different things to different negotiators the result was that south africa from the very start of the democratic era lacked a national consensus on how to go about consolidating democracy we keep on failing to build a proper roof over our democracy because the constitutional foundations are weak
