combining the modes of historian and critic in unique and compelling ways scully has profoundly influenced the way architecture is thought about and made this illustrated and elegantly designed volume distills scully s incalculable contribution 300 illustrations

this study focuses on the moment in the history of modern art during the 1950s when sculptors and architects began to use concrete to create a previously impossible fusion of their respective art forms and the mutual influences between sculpture and architecture the book pays particular attention to those works that left the concrete brut that is raw or unfinished and thus produced a rough aesthetic that has become an icon of postwar art the author shines a spotlight on the work of andré bloc and the international networks publications and initiatives that he facilitated demonstrating the pivotal role he played in the exchange between architecture and sculpture and the expansion of public art practice placing bloc among a roster of artists and architects working in concrete that also included picasso and le corbusier the book follows the movement from brut s conceptual and material roots in the 1930s into the height of its influence from the mid 1950s to early 1970s it ends by tracing the legacy into the present in so doing it shows how fundamental the use of concrete was to the development of a new architectural sculptural form and in turn how their interdisciplinary and socially focused practices form an overlooked genealogy of the arts in the present this book is ideal for researchers and students in 20th century art architecture design and urban studies a new look at the interrelationship of architecture and sculpture during one of the richest periods of american modern design alloys looks at a unique period of synergy and exchange in the postwar united states when sculpture profoundly shaped architecture and vice versa leading architects such as gordon bunshaft and eero saarinen turned to sculptors including harry bertoia alexander calder richard lippold and isamu noguchi to produce site determined large scale sculptures tailored for their buildings highly visible and well traversed threshold spaces the parameters of these spaces atriums lobbies plazas and entryways led to various designs like sculptural walls ceilings and screens that not only embraced new industrial materials and processes but also demonstrated art s ability to merge with lived architectural spaces marin sullivan argues that these sculptural commissions represent an alternate history of midcentury american art rather than singular masterworks by lone geniuses some of the era s most notable spaces philip johnson s four seasons restaurant in mies van der rohe s seagram building max abramovitz s philharmonic hall at lincoln center and pietro belluschi and walter gropius s pan am building would be diminished without the collaborative efforts of architects and artists at the same time the artistic creations within these spaces could not exist anywhere else sullivan shows that the principle of synergy provides an ideal framework to assess this pronounced relationship between sculpture and architecture she also explores the afterlives of these postwar commissions in the decades since their construction a fresh consideration of sculpture s relationship to architectural design and functionality following world war ii alloys highlights the affinities between the two fields and the ways their connections remain with us today
