this study presents a revised view of egyptian foreign relations in the eastern mediterranean during the old kingdom 3rd 6th dynasties based on an extensive analysis of old and new archaeological data and its relationship to the well known textual sources the material demonstrates that while egypt s most important relationships were with byblos and the lebanese coast generally it was an active participant in the geo political and economic affairs of the levant throughout much of the third millennium bce the archaeological data shows that the foundation of these relationships was established at the beginning of the early dynastic period and essentially continued until the end of the 6th dynasty with ebbs flows and changes of geographical and political emphasis it is argued that despite the paucity of textual data the 4th dynasty represents the apogee of egypt s engagement in the region a time when the centralised state was at the height of its power and control of human and economic capital more broadly this study shows that egyptian interaction in the eastern mediterranean fits the pattern of state to state contact between ruling elites which was underpinned by official expeditions engaged in gift and commodity exchange diplomatic endeavours and military incursions important evidence for occupation spanning the late 1st century early roman to the 9th century middle saxon was found by cam arc now oxford archaeology east in 2002 the initial phase of a roman farmstead consisted of fragmentary evidence for a ditched field system and livestock enclosures the layout being altered throughout the roman period barns trackways wells and rubbish dumps were also evident with environmental and artefactual evidence pointing to a predominantly pastoral economy both pottery and metalwork imply continuity of settlement at the site from the roman to the anglo saxon periods early saxon activity of the 5th 6th centuries is attested by seven sunken featured buildings a possible hall ovens pits and a contracted or crouched burial most of the buildings were deliberately set around a rectangular space perhaps representing an extended family grouping within a much larger settlement after a possible hiatus the site was again used in the middle saxon period the field boundary ditches were replaced by a large enclosure containing a post hole building and another oven metalwork and associated debris in the backfill of an earlier building and nearby pit attest to ferrous working possibly including steel production and the gathering of scrap metal for recycling the site evidently formed part of a middle saxon settlement such as a large village engaged in craft activities and perhaps providing a local market its eventual abandonment was probably a result of the defeat of king edmund at thetford in 869 and subsequent settlement changes under danish occupancy
