the islamic world often regarded as an anathema to civil society in fact has rich traditions of associational life pursuing common good these religious resources have been reinterpreted for the enhancement of civic virtues and participatory politics in contemporary context that is democratization such pioneering efforts have been clearly observable in muslim southeast asia in november 1999 the sasakawa peace foundation invited ten muslim activists and scholars from the region to japan for exchanging views and experiences among themselves and with japanese participants here their papers and discussions are compiled into a book islam and civil society in southeast asia

this book looks into the role and effects of public apologies in international relations it focuses on two major questions why and when do states issue apologies for historic crimes and how and under what conditions are these apologies successful in remedying conflictive relationships in recent years we have witnessed an unseen popularity of apologies with numerous politicians managers and clergymen being eager to apologise and atone for the wrong doings of their countries or institutions public apologies thus are a new and highly interesting while nevertheless still puzzling phenomenon the precise role and meaning of which in international politics remains to be explored this book sets out to do exactly this focusing in particular on state apologies it assembles twelve detailed empirical case studies which deal with the two questions raised above in the first part the case studies reconstruct the processes in which state representatives react to calls for public atonement and in the second part the case studies explore the reactions to the apology and evaluate signs for its success or failure all case studies are based on a theoretical framework which is outlined in the introduction to the book and helps develop tentative assumptions about the emergence and the effects of state apologies drawing on different strands of literature such as political science philosophy sociology or psychology this work will be of great interest to students and scholars of conflict reconciliation international relations and transitional justice the report deals with an experimental and theoretical investigation of nonlinearities in x band impatt reflection amplifiers special emphasis was placed on cross modulation intermodulation and compression effects in single stage amplifiers and on a special cascaded broadband amplifier the amplifiers were tested with different input powers signal frequencies and bias levels a simple resistive model with two inputs was used for the theoretical work the experimental results were in good agreement with the theoretical predictions no prominent nonlinearities were observed for input powers 20 db below the saturation power of the amplifier the nonlinearities of the cascaded amplifier were found to be somewhat reduced in comparison with those of the single stage amplifier author
