if there is one trend in children s and ya literature that seems to be enjoying a steady rise in popularity it is the expansion of the ya dystopian genre while the genre has been lauded for its potential to expand horizons promote critical thinking and foster social awareness and activism it has also come under scrutiny for its promotion of specific ideologies and its often sensationalist approach to real world problems in an examination of six ya dystopian texts spanning more than twenty years of development of the genre this book explores the way in which posthumanist ideologies in particular are deployed or resisted in these texts as a means of making sense of the specific challenges which young people confront in the twenty first century this collection of new essays by scholars from many different intellectual perspectives and ethnic backgrounds explores practical as well as theoretical aspects of racism and sexism while probing the connections and differences between them practical aspects examined include racism and sexism in the women s movement the hidden nature of privilege and the challenges feminists face in the 21st century theoretical issues addressed include the viability of the very concept of race and the significance of concepts like whiteness ethnicity and gender identity there are two tendencies in present public discussions social problems have their causes in the individual and are thus not a problem of socio economic inequality consequently we find an increasing policy in europe of selfactivation and self help as substitutes of social work on the other hand new types of social vulnerability and challenges for social work and social policy are detected which are discussed in the book in their european dimensions beginning in the last century in europe processes of social exclusion are discussed as common phenomena of the crisis in social welfare systems they have their origins in the radical changes in paid employment the weakening of family ties and the increasing incapability of the welfare state to promote social inclusion new types of social vulnerabilities are emerging containing chances as well as risks they are discussed in two ways on the one hand the implementation of indicator based management systems of social services is attempted which implies a range of chances and risks in ethical and professional self image on the other hand there are self help movements social networks and other social types of resilience which are often a complement or support to social work yet there is a policy to substitute social work by a strategy of self activation both developments are signs of the present and indicators of the future of social work they show the necessity of clarifying the social and political scopes and prospects of social work in societies at the crossroads of enhancing civility human development and social security or overburden the vulnerable who face new dimensions of psychological ecological and economic distress this book is an attempt to bring together several european discussions concerning social work and social politics has feminism transformed development studies what happens to feminist theory and practice within the development industry each contributor to this volume seeks to answer these questions by describing her project and its feminist rationale and analyzing three fundamental challenges how to make a feminist agenda work within development agencies including the difficulties of finding funding and the constraints imposed by funders the ethical and methodological issues raised by feminism including the differences between women and the legitimacy of studying the other and how to find new ways to work together for global change without imposing western feminism on southern women
