this volume examines agenda setting theory as it applies to the news media's influence on corporate reputation. It presents interdisciplinary international and empirical investigations examining the relationship between corporate reputation and the news media throughout the world, providing coverage of more than twenty-five countries. Contributors write about their local media and business communities representing developed, emerging, and frontier markets, including Argentina, Brazil, Chile, China, Germany, Greece, Japan, Nigeria, Spain, and Turkey, among others. The chapters present primary and secondary research on various geopolitical issues, the nature of the news media, the practice of public relations, and the role of public relations agencies in each of the various countries. Each chapter is structured to consider two to three hypotheses in the country under discussion, including the impact of media visibility on organizational prominence, top of mind awareness, and brand name recognition; the impact of media favorability on the public's organizational images of these firms; how media coverage of specific public issues and news topics relates to the associations people form of specific firms; contributors contextualize their findings in light of the geopolitical environment of their home countries, the nature of their media systems, and the relationship between business and the news media within their countries' borders, incorporating scholarship from a broad range of disciplines, including advertising, strategic management, business, political communication, and sociology. This volume has much to offer scholars and students examining business and the news media.

The search for an ethical foundation for corporate behaviour has been a powerful theme of scholarship in company law since the middle of the last century. In an era of social democracy, the search has intensified, fuelled by the demise of the New Right both in economic and social terms. The author of this path-breaking and provocative work argues that Third Way politics offers a means of identifying that foundation by emphasizing the need for social co-operation and partnership through shared agendas rather than regulatory pressure. In contrast to many contemporary globalization theorists, the

The Corporation and the Constitution is a significant contribution to modern constitutional and corporate scholarship. It offers a coherent theory of applying the constitution to the corporation, and it forces scholars to appreciate the developments that have taken place totally outside the realm of traditional scholarly discourse on the constitution.
