chinese comparative literature has a great representative in the contemporary scholar and writer qian zhongshu 1910 1998 his comparative method defies every categorization and his extensive use of quotations in seven languages the main characteristic of his style creates a collage of literary motifs and genres that constitutes a fertile field for analysis to grasp the general principles of world literature italian quotations and the influence of italian literature on the comparative method of qian zhongshu are the main concern of this analysis and are a topic never before dealt with in mainland and overseas qian xue studies the study outlines the threads that move qian zhongshu in the choice of authors and works that constitute in quotation the core of his method and answers questions on the necessity of such a consistent use of quotations and on the role that foreign literatures with a focus on the italian one have in the definition of a comparative method that seems to be all inclusive and difficult to grasp to seize an understanding of the principles that lead global literature in an enhancement of mutual comprehension between countries and peoples seems a desirable yet unrealistic goal qian zhongshu through his use of quotations to establish a dialogue between different historical epochs and distant spatial settings wants to demonstrates that this desire is attainable
