- 1 Autocracies Rule by One Dictatorship This is characterized by absolute power concentrated in a single individual often attained through force or coercion Dictators typically disregard laws suppress opposition and control all aspects of life Examples include North Korea under the Kim dynasty Understanding the difference between a dictator and a monarch discussed below is crucial The key differentiator lies in the legitimacy of power a monarch often claims legitimacy through hereditary succession while a dictator achieves power through force Monarchy While also ruled by a single person monarchies often involve a hereditary succession Constitutional monarchies like the UK limit the monarchs power through a constitution and parliament Absolute monarchies historically more common grant the monarch absolute authority The key to mastering this distinction lies in analyzing the limitations or lack thereof on the rulers power
- 2 Oligarchies Rule by the Few Oligarchies are systems where power rests with a small elite group This group might be based on wealth family connections

military power or religious authority Understanding the basis of power within the oligarchy is key to differentiating various types For instance a military junta is a type of oligarchy where power is held by military leaders The lack of citizen participation and the concentration of power in the hands of a few are the defining characteristics

3 Democracies Rule by the People Direct Democracy

In this system citizens directly participate in decisionmaking Ancient Athens is often cited as a albeit imperfect example Direct democracies are challenging to implement in large populations hence the prevalence of representative democracies

Representative Democracy Republic

This is the most common form of democracy today Citizens elect representatives to make decisions on their behalf The United States is a prime example of a republic The core difference between a pure democracy and a republic lies in the indirect nature of citizen participation in the latter Understanding the mechanisms of representation elections voting systems etc is essential
