Compare expenses to income: Identify areas where you're overspending and areas where you can cut back.
Create a budget: Allocate your net income to different expense categories based on your priorities and needs. Aim for a balanced budget where your income equals or exceeds your expenses.

Example: Lets say your net monthly income is 2500. After tracking your expenses, you find you're spending 2800 per month. This clearly shows an overspending issue. You need to adjust your budget by reducing expenses in some categories, e.g., eating out less, reducing
