this is an african retelling of euripides an unnervingly topical story of a people and a beloved city destroyed by the brutality of war the play was first performed in lagos in 2003 under the distinguished director chuck mike and subsequently toured the uk classical material was traditionally used to express colonial authority but it was also appropriated by imperial subjects to become first a means of challenging colonialism and then a rich field for creating cultural identities that blend the old and the new nobel prize winners such as derek walcott and seamus heaney have rewritten classical material in their own cultural idioms while public sculpture in southern africa draws on greek and roman motifs to represent histories of african resistance and liberation these developments are explored in this collection of essays by international scholars who debate the relationship between the culture of greece and rome and the changes that have followed the end of colonial empires the major thrust of this book is the ethnography of the awka igbo in particular the northern igbos in delineating and analysing the socio cultural structures the author attempts to demonstrate their continuity from pre colonial times to the present thus showing the resilience of awka igbo culture despite the seventy year british occupation the core of the work is the ethnography of awka town which the author uses to distinguish between local northern customs and those which are pan igbo
