philosophy and related disciplines

the nature of human resource development hrd has been and remains a contested topic the debate was sparked in part by monica lee s seminal 2001 paper which refused to define the discipline of hrd but has been accentuated by increasing globalization political unrest inequality and the erosion of boundaries should hrd now be seen as more than training or a sub function of large western bureaucracy this book represents a very wide view of hrd that it is at the core of our selves and our relationships and that we continually co create ourselves our organisations and societies these ideas are hung upon a model of holistic agency and supported from sources as diverse as evolutionary psychology science fiction the challenges of transitional economies and the structural uncertainties of contemporary society examining the tensions between self and other agency and structure the book draws inspiration from an almost autoethnographic approach this yields a text that is personal entertaining and easier to read than many academic tomes yet considers the depth and development of the human condition and locates hrd within that this book describes the basic structure and processes through which creative endeavors are initially developed and then transformed into creative contributions this volume explores questions which emerge from considering the relationship between nature and ethics through philosophical theological ethical and environmental lenses it will examine the nature understood as essence or character of ethics itself and whether nature understood as natural world has embedded in it a moral code as well as examining how particular ethical theological worldviews influence our treatment of nature is there an abstract objective moral code in nature if so how do we gain access to this code of ethics is it only accessible through revelation as in some religious traditions or is this code of ethics more generally accessible to humanity indeed does such an objective notion of ethics exist could it be that ethics are a natural and subjective development is ethics a feature of nature or have we invented it there is this volume might suggest no consensus on these questions as they at times divide and at times unite both the contributors to this volume and the bodies of scholarly work with which they engage as time moves forward investigations into ethics in the context of the relationship between humanity and nature have become more complex taking account of advances in the natural sciences and a growing appreciation of nature how are we to understand our relationship with nature and how does this have implications for our understandings of ethics are we now realising the repercussions of our failure to take seriously our experience of climate change this volume offers the reader a unique and underrepresented interdisciplinary perspective from philosophers theologians and environmentalists on the dynamic relationship between nature and ethics it offers breadth in terms of the range of theoretical cultural philosophical and theological frameworks but balances this with chapters providing an in depth treatment of particular lenses e g the work of hegel or the work of gordon kauffman through philosophical and theological investigation these collected essays deepen and problematize the scientific and pragmatic discourses on nature offering scholars solid resources to engage with some of the most pressing issues of our time in light of ongoing debates at many levels on dealing with climate change the category of learning disabilities continues to be among the most contentious in special education much of the debate and dissent emanates from a lack of understanding about its basic nature the failure to evolve a comprehensive and unified perspective about the nature of learning disabilities has resulted in the concept being lost the loss is best illustrated through the failure to answer this seemingly simple question what is a learning disability using historical empirical theoretical conceptual and philosophical analyses this volume explores a number of problems and issues facing the field of learning disabilities the chapters cover historical influences definitional problems primary characteristics assessment practices theoretical development major themes research and measurement models and long term outcomes the goal is to explicate the nature of learning disabilities by analyzing what it was supposed to be what it has become and what it might be a predominant theme running through this text is the necessity for the field of learning disabilities to regain integrity by recapturing its essence a valuable resource for anyone interested in the development of memory this text discusses the development of long term memory including autobiographical memory and argues that memory is an adaptive mechanism for the development and survival of humans and non human animals
