this is the inaugural lecture by a g hopkins the smuts professor of commonwealth history in which professor hopkins assesses the present state of and prospects for imperial and commonwealth history he attempts to explain why the study of the british empire and commonwealth should regain the central place it once enjoyed in historical studies and indicates ways in which new approaches to an old subject might enable it to do so alan lester s deny and disavow is an analysis which challenges the distancing denial and disavowal of british racism and racially charged violence especially britain s response to the black lives matter blm movement prof lester is a world expert in studies of empire and colonial history he is coeditor of a leading book series on imperial history studies in imperialism and has written nine books over the last 25 years the latest being ruling the world freedom crisis and liberalism in the nineteenth century british empire cambridge university press 2021 deny and disavow boldly confronts apologists for the british empire including the prime minister and cabinet secretaries lester contends that this distancing denial and disavowal policy is part of a deliberate strategy to refute the claims and resist the demands of those who want recognition and reorganisation his analysis draws upon thirty years of research and writing and supports blm s call for increased awareness of the legacies of structural racism bequeathed by the british empire

during the mao era china s museums served an explicit and uniform propaganda function underlining official party history eulogizing revolutionary heroes and contributing to nation building and socialist construction with the implementation of the post mao modernization program in the late 1970s and 1980s and the advent of globalization and market reforms in the 1990s china underwent a radical social and economic transformation that has led to a vastly more heterogeneous culture and polity yet china is dominated by a single leninist party that continues to rely heavily on its revolutionary heritage to generate political legitimacy with its messages of collectivism self sacrifice and class struggle that heritage is increasingly at odds with chinese society and with the state s own neoliberal ideology of rapid paced development glorification of the market and entrepreneurship in this ambiguous political environment museums and their curators must negotiate between revolutionary ideology and new kinds of historical narratives that reflect and highlight a neoliberal present in exhibiting the past kirk denton analyzes types of museums and exhibitionary spaces from revolutionary history museums military museums and memorials to martyrs to museums dedicated to literature ethnic minorities and local history he discusses red tourism a state sponsored program developed in 2003 as a new form of patriotic education designed to make revolutionary history come alive and urban planning exhibition halls which project utopian visions of china s future that are rooted in new conceptions of the past denton s method is narratological in the sense that he analyzes the stories museums tell about the past and the political and ideological implications of those stories focusing on official exhibitionary culture rather than alternative or counter memory denton reinserts the state back into the discussion of postsocialist culture because of its centrality to that culture and to show that state discourse in china is neither monolithic nor unchanging the book considers the variety of ways state museums are responding to the dramatic social technological and cultural changes china has experienced over the past three decades feminist history continues to change the way history is written and in doing so changes our view of the past the authors of this collection explore how issues of sexuality class nationalism and colonialism informed the ways in which women were represented and continue to be represented in history they show the ways in which women have been excluded silenced and misrepresented in stories of the past and how women s lives have been distorted or simplified in conventional historical accounts together they suggest fresh ways of approaching women s history and use examples of work in new areas of research such as women s health and leisure in order to demonstrate the effectiveness of the various methodologies being proposed historians traditionally claim to be myth breakers but national history since the nineteenth century shows quite a record in myth making this exciting new volume compares how national historians in europe have handled the opposing pulls of fact and fiction and shows which narrative strategies have contributed to the success of national histories
