a story about the rise and fall of a kingdom forged in the fight between the embodiment of light and ancient darkness this chronicle marks the genesis of an era shrouded in despair and everlasting hope twenty years ago the dark fantasy tales were born whose ashes gave rise to the world of ezorath soaring across the seas of ages darkness entwines with light clawing at each other until they drown within the horizon of an endless cycle it is the dance of opposites of extremes that never cease the mighty and the mortal angels and demons monsters and benefactors countless distorted reflections of a life long torn apart by violence a soul forged in the fire of dragons standing defiant against the inevitable end the infernal path of free will is the journey that carries the hellway franchise s framework saga dark gloria from the creation of the first worlds into the unknown each chapter is made tangible by professional paintings crafted by artists conjuring awe and horror in the same breath remember this and never forget every ending carries within it the promise of a new beginning archaeological interpretation is an imaginative act stratigraphy and artefacts do not tell us what the past was like that is the task of the archaeologist the diverse group of contributors to this volume address the relationship between archaeology and imagination through the medium of historical fiction and fictive techniques both as consumers and as producers the fictionalisation of archaeological research is often used to disseminate the results of scholarly or commercial archaeology projects for wider public outreach here instead the authors focus on the question of what benefits fiction and fictive techniques as inspiration and method can bring to the practice of archaeology itself the contributors a mix of archaeologists novelists and other artists advance a variety of theoretical arguments and examples to advance the case for the value of a reflexive engagement between archaeology and fiction themes include the similarities and differences in the motives and methods of archaeologists and novelists translation empathy and the need to humanise the past and diversify archaeological narratives the authors are sensitive to the epistemological and ethical issues surrounding the influence of fiction on researchers and the incorporation of fictive techniques in their work sometimes dismissed as distracting just so stories or even as dangerously relativistic narratives the use of fictive techniques has a long history in archaeological research and examples from the scholarly literature on many varied periods and regions are considered the volume sets out to bring together examples of these disparate applications and to focus attention on the need for explicit recognition of the problems and possibilities of such approaches and on the value of further research about them
