wendy gan uses privacy as a means to explore what modernity meant to british women of the early twentieth century margaret atwood enjoys a unique prominence in canadian letters with over thirty books to her credit in genres ranging from children s writing to dystopic novels she is as creatively diverse as she is internationally acclaimed her success however has been double edged the very popularity that makes her such a prominent figure in the literary world also renders her vulnerable to claims of being a sell out as she relates in her empson lectures the open eye negotiates the space between these positions acknowledging atwood s remarkable achievement while considering how it impacts on national politics and identity the range of perspectives in this volume is stimulating and enlightening the open eye begins with a focus on atwood as she presents herself and is presented in canada and abroad and then proceeds to consider more broadly the intersection of life and literature that atwood s works and persona effect it offers fresh insight into atwood s early writing redresses the critical void regarding her poetry and shorter prose pieces and provides a critical base from which readers can assess atwood s most recent novels a common thread throughout these essays is the recognition of atwood s importance in the literary realm in general and in canadian literature more particularly published in english rethinking the history of women s writing and literary history itself this volume 2 examines the diversity of early women s writing from verse and songs to household records and recipes offering a new paradigm for understanding women s shaping roles in the literary religious and political movements of the sixteenth century this timely book traces ideas of pacifism through english literature particularly poetry four wide ranging chapters drawing on both religious and secular texts provide intellectual and historical contexts there follows a chronological analysis of poetry which rejects war and celebrates peace from the middle ages to the present day the book provides inspiration for all readers who seriously believe that conflict and war do not solve problems and for students it provides a new kind of thematic history of literature ellen terry 1847 1928 was one of the first modern stars of the british stage she toured america and australia and was adored by the public and has become an icon of victorian womanhood a transitional figure terry straddled both the victorian and the modern world the controversies of her private life were numerous elopement cohabitation single motherhood multiple marriages two with significant age differences yet she maintained the reputation of a thoroughly feminine woman of the age terry s correspondence was both exuberant and extensive despite falling victim to selective destruction the remaining letters provide a fascinating insight into the dynamics of the victorian theatre as well as the difficulties of life for a woman maintaining a successful public persona whilst raising two illegitimate children the collection brings together material from across the world and includes letters to many famous addressees bram stoker and george bernard shaw among them as well as many lesser or unknown recipients who often get the best of terry s playful prose the collection will be of value to those with an interest in victorian theatre women s suffrage and fin de siecle literature publisher s description based on interviews with over thirty irish women this book covers their experiences during the second world war years and how the war impacted on them in terms of their public and private roles themes such as class and income employment health and housing are covered arising from the women s recollections and international research into women and war the women from a variety of family and social backgrounds mainly lived and worked in belfast and dublin between 1939 and 1945 but some of them went to britain to take up war work the women s own stories are compared with contemporary observations from a number of sources including the mass observation diary of belfast woman moyna woodside other comparisons are made with newspaper commentaries and the files of government and other public bodies responsible for shaping social policy the book shows that despite the many restrictions that the interviewees faced in terms of access to education employment opportunities and to equal treatment in a number of spheres most of them overcame the obstacles in their way some of which were considerable although the research demonstrated that in economic political and social terms the war did not make any significant impact on irish women the evidence of the individuals who contributed their memories showed that it offered them opportunities to spread their wings as one of the women described her activities the book also compares the position of irish women with their contemporaries in other western countries while there has been a lot of research on the topic of women and war in other countries no comparable work has yet been carried out here most writers tend to write the same book or poem over and over again expanding its scope and refining its variants margaret atwood however continues to re invent herself as she re invents her characters and her poetic personae with every new work each novel each new poetry collection signals a departure a radical turn in an unexpected direction each becomes a daring journey that expands the reader s consciousness and defeats expectations atwood s writing has dealt with a multiplicity of urgent question from the destruction of the environment the role of women in society and the spiritual alienation caused by consumerism to the desensitising nature of mass culture the loss of individual liberties the responsibility of the writer and the limits of fiction all of which have been individually and in depth addressed in the present collection of essays the contributors gayle greene branko gorjup coral howells lorna irvine stephanie lovelady susan jaret mckinstry jennifer murray caterina ricciardi barbara hill rigney roberta rubenstein come from several different countries making this collection truly international in outlook thanks to their skilful guidance the reader will marvel at the extent to which atwood has internationalised canada and has transformed it into an exciting real and imaginative world he has taught canadian literature in universities in canada and italy the diary is a genre that is often thought of as virtually formless a capacious hold all for the writerâ€™s thoughts and as offering unmediated access to the diaristâ€™s true self focusing on the diaries of katherine mansfield virginia woolf antonia white joe orton john cheever and sylvia plath this book looks at how six very different professional writers have approached the diary form with its particular demands and literary potential as a sequence of separate entries the diary is made up of both gaps and continuities and the different ways diarists negotiate these aspects of the diary form has radical effects on how their diaries represent both the world and the biographical self the different published editions of the diaries by katherine mansfield virginia woolf and sylvia plath show how editorial decisions can construct sometimes startlingly different biographical portraits yet all diaries are constructed and all diary constructions depend on how the writer works with the diary form this anthology reflects the diversity of voices it contains the poems are arranged thematically and the themes reflect the different experiences of war not just for the soldiers but for those left behind this is what makes this volume more accessible and satisfying than others in addition to the established canon there are poems rarely anthologised and a selection of soldiers songs to reflect the voices of the soldiers themselves in the 1990s the french literary arena was enlivened by the emergence of a new generation of women writers this book selects six of its most distinctive voices and addresses important questions about the very new in french women s writing what are young women choosing to write about what do they tell us about changing perceptions of feminine identities what does it mean to write and to read as women at the start of the new millennium an introductory chapter explores key issues such as the woman writer in the public imagination and continuity and change within french women s writing since the 1970s it also highlights thematic threads which recur across the work of the authors studied history and time wandering and exile self and other the body and sexuality and writing and telling the remaining chapters propose productive approaches to the fictional worlds of marie darrieussecq virginie despentes marie ndiaye agnes desarthe lorette nobecourt and amelie nothomb through close readings of their most challenging popular or telling texts they focus on perennial preoccupations in women's writing which are given new treatment by these writers and discuss important developments such as uses of the pornographic myth and fairy tale and parody and irony in new women's writing translation of l'enrico overo bisantio acquistato poema heroico an ambitious and rewarding narrative poem by a prolific female venetian writer who flourished in the early 17th century demonstrating her skill as an epic poet when she was already known for her polemical treatise on the nobility and excellence of women
