intermediate diploma thesis from the year 2009 in the subject pedagogy pedagogic psychology grade 1 ashford university language english abstract starting to implement those new findings already with children that show behavioural and emotional deficits will support them to grow up to be stable adults most important in such cases is that educators as well as parents have to realize that the affected children have to be recognized as disabled and accordingly treated behavior and emotional deficits are not just a willing misbehavior from the child it is a disability excerpt from the psychology of behaviour a practical study of human personality and conduct with a special reference to methods of development the study of man s thoughts feelings and motives is a universally fascinating one even the least thoughtful of us love to watch and speculate upon our neighbours actions and have sometimes an even greater interest for our own any extensive or careful analysis however of human nature has been left almost entirely to the great philosophers and moralizers for the very good reason that the common knowledge of the human mind and its springs of action has been too limited and uncertain to allow of any satisfactory conclusions by the layman about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works seminar paper from the year 2002 in the subject business economics offline marketing and online marketing grade 2 3 b maastricht university faculty of economics and business administration language english abstract when in the early 90s the internet became a mass medium the service industry recognized the potential of this new media quickly several online service providers like yahoo or aol were established these new internet companies tried to take advantage of being the first mover by acquiring new customers in the beginning this was fine since more and more people obtained access and became potential costumers following a typical situation of excess demand and hence the established online service provider could afford to focus more on gaining new customers than on retaining existing ones however this picture turned completely the more popular the internet became and the more new start ups saw their opportunities to penetrate the e commerce arena this led to a shift from excess demand to excess supply in the online service industry consequently the situation of increased competition was followed by a loss of market share and lower profit margins and the strategy of steadily acquiring new customers became ever harder to pursue so that the companies had to rethink their in order to stay competitive the companies have to focus more on the retention of existing customers rather than on searching for new ones this situation is comparable to the offline service industry the offline service industry also experienced decades of prospering growth and now faces a situation of a saturated market the acquiring of new customers has become extremely difficult and costly and retaining existing ones has become harder and harder due to an increased customer willingness to switch the service provider with respect to today s rapidly changing economy it becomes increasingly important for managers in both the offline and online service industry to explicitly identify the reasons that drive customers to switch their service provider additionally it is also extremely important for the online industry whether they can build on the experiences made in the offline service industry or whether these experiences and approaches are not valid in the internet world each of these facets will be illuminated focusing the analysis on the following core question is the customer switching behaviour substantially different in the online service industry as compared to the offline industry
