during the cold war ideological and politico military rivalries mostly dictated the actions of the competing blocs including their involvement in foreign conflicts in africa for instance the east west rivalry of the time not only fuelled conflicts but also appeared to undermine the use of diplomacy as a tool for peacemaking and conflict resolution with the fall of the berlin wall in 1989 and the demise of the soviet union however there was a transformation of the conflict arena in the continent which presented new opportunities and threats this therefore raises a fundamental question of how the end of the cold war has affected the character of conflicts and their successful management in africa using liberia and somalia as case studies post cold war conflicts in africa analyses how the post cold war conflicts in these two countries and their management differed from what they would have been during the cold war era it shows for instance that while in liberia the major powers appeared content to cede the management of the conflict to the sub regional group ecomog in somalia the conflict appeared to be turned into an arena for simple military experiment without any of the old cold war ideological rivalries playing any role in its trajectory or management the book argues that the end of the cold war offers an opportunity for the successful use of a new approach to conflict management in the continent which would be anchored on traditional african diplomacy this new approach would involve a triumvirate of eminent men and women from the continent regional peacekeeping forces and the warring factions themselves working in concert to replace the rifle with talking till every one agrees
