the united nations world assembly on aging has made advancing health and well being into old age a worldwide call for action and this text at hand shows us what researchers worldwide are doing to answer that call here three of america s most esteemed experts on aging lead a global team of contributors each an expert in his or her country to show us what the top challenges of each nation are and what top research is being done there to meet those while we cannot predict with absolute certainty all of the issues that will arise over the next 20 years we can anticipate some and we must start now to prepare for these challenges an expert from the u s department of health and human services warned at a recent un world assembly on aging needed response to the global population shift is not just the responsibility of governments but will be a product of wise long term decisions made by individuals and societies she explained in most nations globally populations are graying and the number of people aged 65 and older is vastly increasing creating a larger segment of senior citizens than the world has ever before seen across human history the elderly accounted for no more than 3 percent of the world population by the year 2030 the elderly are expected to make up about 25 percent of the world population and while longevity is of course seen as a great success longer lifespan for such masses also creates dilemmas for example the incidence of dementia has already increased significantly with an 11 fold increase in people aged 65 and older in the us since the turn of the century and a similar increase in aged people in scotland has researchers there scrambling to find treatments for what they expect will be a 75 percent increase in dementia over the next 25 years chronic diseases that come with aging are already taxing health care systems in the us and around the world to japan with most experts aware their current health systems would be overrun and lack enough staff and facilities to handle the needs of an elderly population multiplying largely in the coming two decades increases in psychological issues such as dealing with the depression often striking aged people are impending too as are social issues such as how families and public policies will deal with the changing shape of the family this book is concerned with the general issues of ageing learning and education for the elderly and then with the more specific issues of why how and what elders want to learn this monograph consists of 10 chapters written by various internationally renowned researchers and scholar practitioners in the field this special issue highlights how social psychology can further the understanding of important social health interpersonal and intergenerational issues facing people as they age this issue has three goals to generate more interest in aging as an area of study for social psychologists by showcasing researchers who are currently integrating basic social psychological research with issues in aging and lifespan development to challenge readers to think about how their research programs can interconnect with issues in aging and to demonstrate how social psychological processes have direct application to many of the issues facing people as they age giving a comprehensive overview of the discipline this book is designed as a supplementary text for students of social gerontology and ageing policy 3highlighting policy implications specialists consider issues such as long term care ways of measuring well being social relationships of the elderly attitudes to retirement health and crime the book does a good job in prompting deeper consideration of day to day issues about elderly people and points up many unexplored areas worthy of research this is a useful book combining much of general interest for staff working with older people with clear and important messages for its target audience of researchers and policy theorists gps 3 2 this handbook presents the latest information on all aspects of global aging with a focus on asia including policies age associated diseases and conditions health services long term care living arrangements income and social security preventing abuse and the impact of migration on the elderly furthermore the book presents a synthesis of research on population aging social protection policies crimes against the elderly new analyses of trends and discussions of major social policy strategies written by academics practitioners and policymakers in the field of gerontology the book offers an informative resource for demographers gerontologists economists anthropologists and other social scientists studying various facets of aging as well as students in the social and health sciences this second edition of the handbook of communication and aging research captures the ever changing and expanding domain of aging research since it was first recognized that there is more to social aging than demography gerontology has needed a communication perspective like the first edition this handbook sets out to demonstrate that aging is not only an individual process but an interactive one the study of communication can lead to an understanding of what it means to grow old we may age physiologically and chronologically but our social aging how we behave as social actors toward others and even how we align ourselves with or come to understand the signs of difference or change as we age are phenomena achieved primarily through communication experiences synthesizing the vast amount of research that has been published on communication and aging in numerous international outlets over the last three decades the book s contributors include scholars from north america and the united kingdom who are active researchers in the perspectives covered in their particular chapter many of the chapters work to deny earlier images of aging as involving normative decrement to provide a picture of aging as a process of development involving positive choices and providing new opportunities a recurring theme in many chapters is that of the heterogeneity of the group of people who are variously categorized as older aged elderly or over 65 the contributors review the literature analytically in a way that reveals not only current theoretical and methodological approaches to communication and aging research but also sets the future agenda this handbook will be of great interest to scholars and researchers in gerontology developmental psychology and communication and in this updated edition will continue to play a key role in the study of communication and aging authors tice and perkins present a strengths model for addressing the mental health issues of the elderly such as depression and anxiety and use real life examples to show readers how this model can be put to work in the community with no more money or resources than ordinarily encountered this book sheds new light on health issues that concern both aging patients and their caregivers and provides practical and in depth insights the respective chapters address various topics including locomotive organ disease cardiovascular disease diabetes mellitus chronic kidney disease and more japan is currently experiencing a massive growth in its elderly population and at a speed unmatched elsewhere in the world as such this edited volume offers a valuable guide for countries that are likely to experience an increase in their elderly population especially with regard to the epidemiological findings and cohort studies in japan that it presents health issues and care system for the elderly offers a valuable resource for both new and established researchers doctors healthcare workers and students who are seeking information on health problems involving the elderly in the field of public health and gerontology
