the city of clermont ferrand in central france is inextricably linked to the global tire company michelin not only by the industrial social and economic realities that tie employees to employer but also by a multi generational regional belief in the company s entrepreneurial mythos the so called michelin spirit since the 1980s transformations in capitalist systems have challenged the michelin ideology the end of corporate paternalism the reduction of the work force and a new wave of managers have left employees in the region feeling the sting of abandonment even in the face of these significant changes however the ethnographic enquiry at the heart of this book testifies to the enduring strength of the spirit of capitalism even as the bonds between employees companies and their regions are undergoing significant transformation entrepreneurial myths endure in part in fear of the end of a secure organizing structure spanning industries from fashion to sports and from gastronomy to design the researchers present a meticulously curated anthology of research discussing the dual role of tradition as both a stabilizing anchor and a springboard for strategic change today some suppliers have grown increasingly powerful and in certain cases earn revenues that rival or even exceed that of their automaker clients in the pre globalisation period automakers wielded absolute power over their significantly smaller suppliers this book reveals the upending of this relationship with the gradual shift in the balance of power from automakers to their suppliers in this era of globalisation the book examines how suppliers in the global tyres seats constant velocity joints hereafter cvjs braking systems and automotive semiconductor industries have evolved into powerful oligopolies through a mix of acquisition and organic growth strategies it also highlights how joint ventures could be strategically deployed as springboards to acquisition as they enable firms to familiarise themselves with their partners markets and operations moreover the book analyses the disruption stirred by the entry of well resourced technology titans into this industry and their inevitable clash with the traditional incumbents this book is an invaluable reference for anyone interested in learning more about the automakers and now their suppliers relentless quest to create market dominating intelligent driving systems
