architects today must position themselves within an extremely wide ranging field of qualifications this makes it all the more important to have a fresh introduction to the field that makes up one of their core competences the field of design this introductory presentation describes and analyzes the theories strategies and tools of creative design for the purposes of practical work with thoughtfulness and expertise it opens the reader s eyes to the processes that underlie design and demonstrates different ways of communicating about complex design work the first section focuses on the much discussed relationship between design and research between architecture and the sciences the second section describes basic design approaches from vitruvius and alberti through erwin panofsky and wolfgang kemp to otl aicher and vilém flusser the third and largest section presents the elementary tools of design from gestures and words through drawings models and simulations to critique all as instruments of creative design in architecture and its related fields completed projects receive more public attention than the process of their creation and so the myth that architects design buildings alone lives on in fact architects work with a great many others and the relationships that develop particularly with clients have a significant impact on design design through dialogue explores the relationship between client and architect through the lens of four overlapping activities that occur during any project relating talking exploring and transforming cases of design and collaboration range from smaller scale retail residential and educational projects in the us sweden the uk and the pacific rim to large institutions including seattle s central library the national museum of the american indian in washington dc the supreme court in jerusalem and the museum of new zealand material is taken from interviews with clients and architects and research in psychotherapy group dynamics and design studies throughout the book aspects of process are linked to design outcomes to illustrate how architects and clients collaborate creatively the mentality that consumerism and economic growth are cure alls is one of the biggest obstacles to real sustainability but any change seems impossible unthinkable our contemporary paradox finds us relying for our well being on consumer driven economic growth that we actually can t afford not in environmental economic or social terms although architecture and design have long been seen as engines for consumerism and growth increasing numbers of designers are concerned about the problems resulting from growth but designers face a paradox of their own in scenarios of sustainable consumption where people consume or build significantly less what will be left for designers to do this book informed by recent research into the viability of a steady state economy sets an agenda for addressing the designer s paradox of sustainable consumption the agenda includes ways that architecture and design can help transition us towards a new kind of economy that prioritizes real wellbeing rather than economic growth packed with examples and illustrations the book argues that taking action or activism is an important but so far underexplored way for architects and designers to confront consumerism the first chapters explore how economic growth and consumerism shape and are shaped by the professions of architecture product and landscape design and how we can understand the problem of consumerism as four main challenges that designers are already addressing the book maps out the main issues surrounding the development of metrics that designers and others can use to measure wellbeing instead of simply measuring economic growth the second half of the book looks at how design activism works and its connection to growth and consumerist issues these chapters examine how activist practices are financed highlight five specific methods that designers use in working for social change and investigate the power of these methods the book concludes with a consideration of what design s role might be in a post growth society
