shortlisted 2024 msa first book prize toposhesia reads urban planning as a mode of speculative fiction one inextricably linked to histories of british colonialism and liberalism through a particular understanding of place the book focuses on town planning from the late nineteenth century to the present day showing how the contemporary geography of britain sharply unequal and marked by racial division continues ideologies of place established in colonial contexts specifically planning allows for the speculative construction of future places that are both utopian in their ability to resolve political disagreement and at the same tantalizingly realizable able to be produced in concrete reality this speculative imaginary i argue is only possible within the ideological framework of colonialism and the history of empire within which it developed toposhesia refers to a rhetorical device employing the vivid depiction of an often imaginary place this device vijay shows helps us understand urban planning as a narrative genre one that even in its most mundane documents is compelled to produce elaborate fantasies of future places the book examines specific planning movements over time to understand the form and the stakes of their speculative worlds in building these worlds the book shows planners continually coopted literary critiques of the present and reveries of the future retaining literature's aesthetics while eschewing its politics at the same time vijay shows writers and artists have dwelled within and against these colonial imaginaries to seek other means of representing place metaphors are ubiquitously used in the humanities to bring the tangibility of the concrete world to the elaboration of abstract thought drawing on this cognitive function of metaphors this collection of essays focuses on the evocative figures of the gateway and the wall to reflect on the state of postcolonial studies some chapters on such topics as maze making in canada and the berlin wall in the writings of new zealand authors foreground the modes of articulation between literal borders and emotional disconnections while others examine how artefacts ranging from personal letters to clothes may be conceptualized as metaphorical gateways and walls that lead or conversely regulate access to specific forms of cultural expression and knowledge following this line of metaphorical thought postcolonial studies itself may be said to function as either barrier or pathway to further modes of enquiry this much is suggested by two complementary sets of contributions on the one hand those that contend that the canonical centre periphery paradigm and the related writing back model have prevented scholars from recognizing the depth and magnitude of cross cultural influences between civilizations on the other those that argue that the scope of traditional postcolonial models may be fruitfully widened to include territories such as post imperial turkey a geographical and cultural gateway between east and west that features in several of the essays included in this collection ultimately all of the contributions testify to the fact that postcolonial studies is a field whose borders must be constantly redrawn and whose paradigms need to be continually reshaped and rebuilt to remain relevant in the contemporary world in other words the collection s varied approaches suggest that the discipline itself is permanently under construction readers are therefore invited to perform a critical inspection of the postcolonial construction site contributors vera alexander elisabeth bekens devon campbell hall simran chadha carmen concilio margaret daymond marta dvořák claudia duppé elena furlanetto gareth griffiths john c hawley sissy helff marie herbillon deepika marya bronwyn mills padmini mongia golnar nabizadeh gerhard stilz
