this book is the result of years of experience teaching english to spanish undergraduates studying for a degree in english language and literature the focus of the book reflects the assumption that a large majority of the mistakes made by advanced level learners are the result of interference from their native language the approach adopted in this book is based on the idea that correcting one's own mistakes involves two separate operations namely first recognising the error as such and then providing the correction for it in the first two thirds of the book errors are explicitly identified for the learner whose task is simply to correct the errors in the final third however learners must carry out both operations It is this two step approach that the term guided error correction tries to reflect in order to provide sufficient practice each of the errors all characteristic of spanish speakers learning english occurs on six separate occasions in the book in addition the book includes a section of brief explanatory notes at the back of the book where each of the errors is explained with spanish translations provided to enhance comprehension of nuances in meaning these notes are cross referenced with each error in the exercises for handy referral but at the same time represent in themselves a compact reference source for common errors this book will be useful for advanced level spanish speaking learners of english in any context though it has been designed primarily not for systematic consecutive classroom use but rather as a series of self correcting one page exercises that can be pursued sporadically at the learner's convenience this book is part of a series of three books gibraltar is a mere 2.5 square miles of british rock at the southern tip of the iberian peninsula yet this microcosm is home to 20 000 gibraltarians in the wake of age old geo political social and cultural tensions a unique language contact situation has emerged since the arrival of the british in 1704 spanish and english have coexisted in the colony english as the language of the colonial masters and spanish yanito as that of the local people over the last 60 years however this diglossic situation has gradually changed with the gibraltarians adopting english as their mother tongue the result has been the institutionalisation of the language and the emergence of a new new english this empirical study conducts an instrumental analysis of this localised form of english revealing its nativisation process the analysis pinpoints the distinctive features of gibraltarian english and posits that a focussing process is in progress implementing a qualitative quantitative analysis of sociolinguistic data the author also explores the mechanisms behind the speech community's language usage attitudes and ideology over time. Gibraltarians' changing conceptions about English and Spanish have reflected their perceived identity of themselves as British and/or Gibraltarians. This book reveals Gibraltar as a speech community in search of an identity. It is a people aware of its multicultural heritage, determined in its continued rejection of Spanish claims on sovereignty and increasingly ambivalent toward its colonial past.

This book provides a systematic contrastive analysis of the segmentation and representation of English and Chinese translocative motion events. It addresses all the issues critical to understanding TMs in English and Chinese from event segmentation principles and the conceptual structure of TMs and their constituents to the representation of actant motion path and ground. The book argues that the corpus-based alignment for the TM segmentation in both languages, the parameters of actant motion path and ground, and their relevant statistical description are particularly important for understanding English and Chinese TMs. The linguistic materialization of actant, ground, path, and motion together with a wealth of tables and figures offers convincing evidence to support the typological classification of English and Chinese. The book's suggestions regarding the Talmyan bipartite typology and Bohnemeyer's MEP contribute to the advancement of TM studies and language typology and help learners to understand motion events and English-Chinese typological similarities and differences.

diplomatic negotiation of our day is a curious mix of national endeavor within the bloc concept the remnants of our nineteenth century nation alism struggles half willingly with the power that a larger continental or ideological bloc might bring in the sixteenth century men knew that the protective bloc of christendom would not provide peace yet they were not sure that the new national states would secure it either we have much to gain from a study of diplomatic procedures and institutions in such a transitional period this monograph is based upon the great collections of published diplomatic correspondence of england france and spain and thanks to the generosity of dr de lamar jensen i have been fortunate in having at my disposal his hoard of microfilmed letters and dispatches of the leading ambassadors of the sixteenth century of course i have not read all the diplomatic correspondence but i believe i have culled sufficient information to show and analyze the role played by the post and courier service in the diplomacy of early modern europe
