this book addresses many of the key problems facing contemporary societies the social significance attached to various forms of difference most notably race and ethnicity has been seen as resulting in the exclusion of some groups from their full rights as citizens this in turn is viewed as presenting a series of barriers to the creation of more inclusive societies what is the specificity of contemporary racism and what happens to questions of race in a context where multiculturalism is taken for granted few authors address these kinds of questions with subtlety for the most part questions of racism are treated either as self evident or alternatively as self evidenced the first approach accentuated in everyday life and played out in media exposés is the tendency to treat racism as manifestly self evident we just know what racism is in principle and we just know what it looks like when we see it in practice dualistic assumptions dominate this sense of identity relations persons are racist or they are not an act is racist or it is not however despite the obviousness of racism in contexts where different people have different seating arrangements on a bus or somebody says i am better than you because your skin colour is different this approach barely comes to terms with the depth of embodied politics and the elusiveness of structures of racism in the contemporary world because malaysian and singapore share a common colonial migration and political history the racial ethnic composition of the two societies are unsurprisingly similar however since 1965 state nation formation has taken separate trajectories and this has had a differential impact on the processes of racialization and ethnicization in the two countries the contributions in this volume examine how various groups namely the chinese malays tamils eurasian and orang asli have accommodated or resisted the dominant influence of the state in incorporating and subordinating them students and scholars of race and ethnicity will be interested in this work as it is the first attempt to bring together the work of several writers in documenting the consequences of state policies on ethnic formation in the region and raises theoretical issues relevant to this first published in 1989 race ethnicity and society comes as a usable and comprehensive text on race and ethnicity in the united states ringer and lawless set out to fill the gap in the literature by incorporating the positive lessons of the racially turbulent 1960 s and 70s proposing a challenge to three conventional premises of many texts they argue that the treatment of racial minorities in america was qualitatively different from that experienced by the white immigrants that racism was not a mere aberration in american society but was built into the very foundations of the society and that america s experience with minorities was not unique but can instead be located within the mainstream of european expansion and conquest race ethnicity and society will be a standard source for students in the fields of sociology history and political science the goal of eliminating disparities in health care in the united states remains elusive even as quality improves on specific measures disparities often persist addressing these disparities must begin with the fundamental step of bringing the nature of the disparities and the groups at risk for those disparities to light by collecting health care quality information stratified by race ethnicity and language data then attention can be focused on where interventions might be best applied and on planning and evaluating those efforts to inform the development of policy and the application of resources a lack of standardization of categories for race ethnicity and language data has been suggested as one obstacle to achieving more widespread collection and utilization of these data race ethnicity and language data identifies current models for collecting and coding race ethnicity and language data reviews challenges involved in obtaining these data and makes recommendations for a nationally standardized approach for use in health care quality improvement the nature of the connection between economic action and structure and ethnic identities receives here a long overdue and incisive re examination the question is addressed theoretically by revisiting the race and class debate and by a wide ranging review of the contexts in which the conjuncture of ethnicity economy is worked out it is also addressed empirically in a series of case studies of ethnically defined groups and their articulation with the economy a combination of established authors and new researchers have made an invaluable contribution to the field this important study provides a unique and comprehensive analysis of research into the development of adoption policy and practice regarding black and minority ethnic children in the care of local authorities i found this book intellectually stimulating and often provocative it does not make comfortable reading but in the final analysis the case for retaining a commitment to placing children in families which reflect their ethnicity is strongly made felicity collier the director of british agencies for adoption and fostering what are the needs of adopted minority ethnic children to what extent can white families meet these needs should the emphasis on ethnic matching of children and families in adoption be relaxed this book reviews the long running and often fierce controversy surrounding the adoption of black and minority ethnic children either transracially into white families or into matched same race placements through analysis of research and the writings of protagonists the core concepts namely the nature and salience of racial ethnic identity cultural heritage and dealing with racism are explored and located within broader debates on race and the family the history of the controversy is set out in terms of the competing paradigms offered by liberalism and black radicalism and more recent post structuralist influences the author argues the need to see adoption and especially that of black children as inherently political and contested while broadly supporting the case for same race adoption it is suggested that this must rest on acknowledgement of and engagement with social and psychological complexities rather than their suppression beneath doctrinaire formulae race ethnicity and adoption sets the issues in the wider context of a multiracial society and its politics and will be of particular interest to social workers and child care professionals but will also appeal more widely to students of sociology and social and public policy
