written to accompany an exhibition of the same name at the Percival David Foundation of Chinese Art in 1996 this text is designed to explain the basic science involved in ceramic manufacture with reference to Chinese ceramics as they are the most technologically advanced both the exhibition and the book were inspired by many requests for basic information about ceramic technology that did not require experience of making pots or a degree in chemistry to understand the book thus assumes no previous knowledge of ceramic technology or science in general and uses terms which can be defined and explained in a manner accessible to the non specialist adopting the perspective of anthropology of art and combining it with global academic insights this book helps the readers to recognize that history is in great measure the record of human activity which spreads from the local to the regional from the regional to the global and from the global to the universal readers will learn that China was not only the first country to create porcelain but also the first to export it to the world both the products and its techniques therefore the history of Chinese ceramics reflects the history of Chinese foreign trade on the one hand and depicts the expansion of Chinese ceramic techniques and cultures on the other in addition to ceramics types molds decoration and techniques the book analyzes the spiritual impacts and aesthetic conceptions embodied in the utensils of daily use by the Chinese literati therefore it reaches the conclusion that ideological systems and not technological systems are what bring about social revolutions in addition the book is richly illustrated with pictures of earthenware and finely glazed pieces from later periods throughout China's long history ceramic products have been very much a part of people's lives this book takes the reader through the rich history of Chinese ceramics from primitive pottery to the delicate porcelain for which China is famed complemented by full color illustrations throughout this book presents the first comprehensive study of the collecting consumption and display of Chinese porcelain in Britain from the 16th to the 20th century as well as the impact of this activity on British culture beginning with the early porcelains acquired as objects of exotica and vessels for the consumption of tea and coffee followed by porcelains for display in the country house interior the first part of this book reveals the role of porcelain in Britain's developing economic relations with China and the impact of this material on both daily life and interior design the subsequent diplomatic and political conflicts of the 18th and 19th centuries provide a framework for an examination of British consumption of Chinese porcelain as both spoils of war and iconic representations of China material which helped to shape and influence British perceptions of China the final section demonstrates how these perceptions of China and its porcelain began to change significantly in the 20th century with porcelains acquired as works of art and displayed publicly in museums collectors in britain began to specialise in this area and actively invented a field of chinese ceramics that was promulgated by learned societies and culminated in the founding of a museum of chinese ceramics in london by one of the foremost british collectors sir percival david who donated his world class collection to the university of london in 1950 these two volumes present a selection of the chinese ceramics belonging to the celebrated collection of the far eastern art established as a museum in geneva through the bequest of the swiss collector alfred baur in 1964 a full catalogue of these ceramics by john ayers was published in 4 volumes between 1969 1974 but this much sought after work has long been out of print the present more condensed choice of 342 of the finest pieces is illustrated wholly in color with many details including marks and inscriptions and an extensive introduction discussing recent advances in scholarship volume 1 includes tang song and ming wares including many masterpieces of the art volume 2 is devoted to the incomparable series of qing porcelains which features an unparalleled range of monochrome glazed wares
