risk assessment has become a dominant public policy tool for making choices based on limited resources to protect public health and the environment it has been instrumental to the mission of the u s environmental protection agency epa as well as other federal agencies in evaluating public health concerns informing regulatory and technological decisions prioritizing research needs and funding and in developing approaches for cost benefit analysis however risk assessment is at a crossroads despite advances in the field risk assessment faces a number of significant challenges including lengthy delays in making complex decisions lack of data leading to significant uncertainty in risk assessments and many chemicals in the marketplace that have not been evaluated and emerging agents requiring assessment science and decisions makes practical scientific and technical recommendations to address these challenges this book is a complement to the widely used 1983 national academies book risk assessment in the federal government also known as the red book the earlier book established a framework for the concepts and conduct of risk assessment that has been adopted by numerous expert committees regulatory agencies and public health institutions the new book embeds these concepts within a broader framework for risk based decision making together these are essential references for those working in the regulatory and public health fields one of the most pressing questions in neuroscience psychology and economics today is how does the brain generate preferences and make choices with a unique interdisciplinary approach this volume is among the first to explore the cognitive and neural mechanisms mediating the generation of the preferences that guide choice from preferences determining mundane purchases to social preferences influencing mating choice through to moral decisions the authors adopt diverse approaches to answer the question chapters explore the instability of preferences and the common neural processes that occur across preferences edited by one of the world's most renowned cognitive neuroscientists each chapter is authored by an expert in the field with a host of international contributors emphasis on common process underlying preference generation makes material applicable to a variety of disciplines neuroscience psychology economics law philosophy etc offers specific focus on how preferences are generated to guide decision making carefully examining one aspect of the broad field of neuroeconomics and complementing existing volumes features outstanding international scholarship with chapters written by an expert in the topic area this book addresses the issue of agency in relation to child marriage in international campaigns against child marriage there is a puzzle of agency while international human rights institutions celebrate girls exercise of their agency not to marry they do not recognize their agency to marry child marriage usually defined as any formal marriage or informal union where one or both of the parties are under 18 years of age is normally considered as forced which is to say that it is assumed that are not capable of consenting to marriage this book however re-examines this assumption through a detailed socio-legal examination of child marriage in indonesia eliciting the multiple competing frameworks according to which child marriage takes place the book considers the complex reasons why children marry structural explanations such as lack of opportunities and oppressive social structures are important but not exhaustive explanations exploring the subjective reasons by listening to children's perspectives their stories show that many of them decide to marry for love desire to belong to the community and for new opportunities and hopes the book then demonstrates how the child marriage framework and indeed the human rights framework in general is constructed on too narrow a vision of human agency one that cannot but fail to respect and promote the agency of all regardless of gender race religion and age this book will be of interest to scholars students and practitioners in the areas of children's rights legal anthropology and socio-legal studies around the world the need for highly trained scientists and technicians remains high especially for positions that require employees to have a college degree and skills in math science and technology the pipeline into these jobs begins in high school but many leaks occur before young people reach the highly educated workforce needed to sustain leadership in science and technology students drop out of the educational pipeline in science and technology at alarming rates at each educational transition beginning in high school but women and ethnic minority youth drop out at a faster rate women and minorities are consistently underrepresented in science and engineering courses and majors they account for a small portion of the work force in high paying and more innovative jobs that require advanced degrees this schism between the skills necessary in our ever changing economy and the skill set that most young adults acquire is troubling it leads us to ask the question that forms the basis for this issue why are adolescents and young adults particularly women and minorities opting out of the math science and technology pipeline the volume addresses gender and ethnic differences in the math science and technology pipeline from multiple approaches including theoretical perspectives a review of the work in this field presentation of findings from four longitudinal studies and a discussion of research implications given the current educational and economic climate this is the 110th issue of the jossey bass quarterly report series new directions for child and adolescent development in this work of historically informed political theory kimberly smith sets out to understand how nineteenth century americans answered the question of how the people should participate in politics did rational public debate the ideal that most democratic theorists now venerate transcend all other forms of political expression how and why did passion disappear from the ideology if not the practice of american democracy to answer these questions she focuses on the political culture of the urban north during the turbulent jacksonian age roughly 1830 50 when the shape and character of the democratic public were still fluid smith s method is to interpret in light of such popular discourse as newspapers and novels several key texts in nineteenth century american political thought frederick douglass s fourth of july speech and narrative angelina grimke s debate with catharine beecher frances wright s lectures and harriet beecher stowe s uncle tom s cabin such texts smith finds highlight many of the then current ideas about the extremes of political expression her readings support the conclusions that the value of rational argument itself was contested that the emergent enlightenment rationalism may have helped to sterilize political debate and that storytelling or testimony posed an important challenge to the norm of political rationality smith explores facets of the political culture in ways that make sense of traditions from whiggish resistance to protestant narrative testimony she helps us to understand such puzzles as the point of mob action and other ritualistic disruptions of the political process our simultaneous attraction to and suspicion of political debates and the appeal of stories by and about victims of injustice also found in her book are keen analyses of the antebellum press and the importance of oratory and public speaking smith shows that alternatives to reasoned deliberation like protest resistance and storytelling have a place in politics such alternatives underscore the positive role that interest passion compassion and even violence might play in the political life of america her book therefore is a cautionary analysis of how rationality came to dominate our thinking about politics and why its hegemony should concern us ultimately smith reminds the reader that democracy and reasoned public debate are not synonymous and that the linkage is not necessarily a good thing
