examining the victorian serial as a text in its own right catherine delafield re reads five novels by elizabeth gaskell anthony trollope dinah craik and wilkie collins by situating them in the context of periodical publication she traces the roles of the author and editor in the creation and dissemination of the texts and considers how first publication affected the consumption and reception of the novel through the periodical medium delafield contends that a novel in volume form has been separated from its original context that is from the pattern of consumption and reception presented by the serial the novel's later re-publication still bears the imprint of this serialized original and this book's investigation into nineteenth century periodicals both generates new readings of the texts and reinstates those which have been lost in the reprinting process. DeLafield's case studies provide evidence of the ways in which household words, Cornhill Magazine, Good Words, All the Year Round, and Cassell's Magazine were designed for new audiences of novel readers. Serialization and the novel in mid-Victorian magazines addresses the material conditions of production, illustrates the collective and collaborative creation of the serialized novel, and contextualizes a range of texts in the nineteenth century experience of print.

important American periodical dating back to 1850

This anthology makes available to students and general readers the rich variety of Victorian magazines for women. The extracts range from fashion magazines to feminist journals, from serious works for Christian mothers to tales of romance and passion for sweethearts. Focusing on the historical development of the British women's magazine, this extensively illustrated work gives access to texts which few readers ever see. The first main section describes and illustrates eight kinds of magazine for women, though they have common features, the differences between the Drawing Room Journal of the 1830s and 1840s and the cheap domestic magazines of the 1890s are clearly demonstrated. The second section focuses on those elements which made up the magazine's typical mix of ingredients, including fiction, the fashion plate, poetry, political journalism, advice columns, and reader's letters. The last section is the most comprehensive listing of British Victorian women's magazines which currently exists. This is a work of scholarship, but one which will appeal to students of cultural, historical, literary, and women's studies, as well as to the general interested reader. Like the magazines it represents, it offers its readers both entertainment and instruction.
