the old adage you are what you eat has never seemed more true than in this era when ethics politics and the environment figure so prominently in what we ingest and in what we think about it then there are connoisseurs whose approaches to food address good taste and frequently require a language that encompasses cultural and social dimensions as well from the highs and lows of connoisseurship to the frustrations and rewards of a mother encouraging her child to eat the essays in this volume explore the complex and infinitely varied ways in which food matters to all of us educated tastes is a collection of new essays that examine how taste is learned developed and represented it spans such diverse topics as teaching wine tasting food in don quixote soviet cookbooks cruel foods and the lambic beers of the belgian payottenland a set of key themes connect these topics the relationships between taste and place how our knowledge of food shapes taste experiences how gustatory discrimination functions as a marker of social difference and the place of ethical environmental and political concerns in debates around the importance and meaning of taste with essays that address variously the connections between food drink and music the place of food in the development of italian nationhood and the role of morality in aesthetic judgment educated tastes offers a fresh look at food in history society and culture making taste public takes an ethnographic approach to show how social relations shape and are shaped by the taste of food recognizing that different cultures have different taste preferences and flavour principles embedded in cuisine editors carole counihan and susanne h jlund ask how these differences are generated the editors have compiled 14 chapters to show how specific influences become a part of our sensorial apparatus and identity through shared experiences of making eating and talking about food using case studies from asia europe and america the book presents a theory of how taste is made public through everyday practices the authors are exploring how place production methods and cooking techniques create tastes they discuss the criteria determining good and bad tastes and how tastes and memories evolve over time subjects such as how values can be embedded in taste and the role of taste education in food movements homes and schools are explored the different chapters examine definitions and mobilizations of taste in different institutions public places and regions around the world to reveal ethnographic understandings of how people learn experience and share taste with contributions spanning the solomon islands denmark japan canada france the usa and italy making taste public is a fascinating account of how our sense of taste is continuously shaped and re shaped in relation to social and cultural context societal and environmental premises the book will interest anyone studying anthropology sociology food studies sensory studies and human geography
