essay from the year 2006 in the subject english language and literature studies linguistics grade 1 5 university of hildesheim englische sprache und didaktik language english abstract therefore intercultural communication competence

has become a theme which concerns everybody and which will even become more and more important in our world of globalization in order to avoid misunderstandings or even hostile attitudes ending up in conflicts in order to live peacefully in the global village and be able to solve the growing number of global problems which do not stop at national borders the ability to understand people from different cultures and to communicate competently with them has taken on an extreme urgency however achieving this aim sounds easier than it is to communicate competently with people from other cultures it is not enough to speak the same language as they do even though two people speak the same language it is possible that they do not understand each other this thesis becomes obvious in the following critical incident a japanese negotiating with a german business partner says that the deal will be difficult when the german asks how his company can help to solve the problem the japanese is confused while the japanese meant that the deal is off the german thought there were only some obstacles which can be overcome this phenomenon can be explained due to the fact that both speakers know the linguistic rules of the language such as grammar and vocabulary but they are not aware of the cultural norms attitudes and behavior of their communication partner they have linguistic competence but no intercultural communication competence this lack of intercultural communication competence and the ignorance of cultural differences might cause many misunderstandings in order to understand the sources of misunderstandings and to be aware of intercultural communication problems it is necessary to know and to understand the concept of communication since it is not possible to transmit messages directly from one person's brain to that of another person we have to put our ideas into codes that can be transmitted consequently communication can be described as an exchange of messages between a sender and a receiver in this process the sender encodes the message which means that he produces a set of symbols and the receiver has to decode the message which means that he tries to understand the meaning of the symbols by interpreting or making sense of them the three step method refers to obstacles that impede effective communication we are often not fully aware of the norms values and rules that we learn during our socialization every individual thus sees perceives and interprets everything around him from the limited perspective of his own norms and values of which he is only partially aware as a result the individual tends to regard his own norms and values as universal people tend to attribute their own norms values and perceptions to other people people fail to make their own wishes shortcomings and limits sufficiently clear to each other and or fail to do so early enough because of lack of familiarity with their own and other peoples communication codes norms and values in intercultural communication he finds that many obstacles have their origins in the differences of norms and values between different cultures he provides the following three steps to deal with those obstacles step 1 getting to know ones own norms values and behavioural codes which rules and codes influence ones ways of thinking acting and communicating step 2 getting to know the norms values and behavioural codes of the other party in doing so opinions about the behaviour of the other party should be separated from facts what is the meaning behind the unusual behaviour of the other party step 3 determining how to deal with the observed differences in norms values and behavioural codes in the given situation each party should establish the extent to which he is willing to adjust to and accept the behaviour of the other party these limits should be made clear to the other party if possible in a timely fashion and in a way consistent with the communication codes of that party
