the categories of father mother child sibling and friend occupy successive chapters in this study and reveal the changing nature and value of those roles as played in texts written by a broad spectrum of eighteenth century authors jacket this guidebook pulls together for the first time the best thinking in the field today about different approaches for working with these families it is written by and for mental health professionals who work directly with alienated children targeted parents and families affected by parental alienation throughout the past 30 years there have been significant developments in theory and research relating family variables to various psychopathologies the potential importance of such efforts is obviously great given the implications that reliable and valid findings would hold for treatment and preventive interventions across a variety of settings and populations the purpose of this volume is to present a critical evaluation of this field of inquiry through a detailed assessment of the theoretical perspectives the methodological issues and the substantive findings that have characterized family studies of psychopathology during the past several decades the book is divided into four parts each containing contributions from leading researchers and theorists in the field the first part background presents a review of the major streams of influence that have shaped the development and the present character of the field the second part conceptual foundations contains presentations of general models and orientations relevant to family studies of psychopathology in most cases a particular theoretical perspective provides the primary underpinning of the approach the exception to this format being the family model of david reiss based on the concept of the family paradigm the major objective of this part is to present a broad yet detailed set of chapters that address the conceptual status of the field it is hoped that this material will provide a rich background against which subsequent discussions of specific theories methods and findings can be more fully appreciated several years ago two of my colleagues and i had the opportunity to interview fritz heider perhaps the most influential theorist in the field of social psychology harvey ickes kidd 1976 during our interview heider affirmed a belief that had guided his career since the 1920s the belief that the study of human relationships is the most important task in which social scientists can engage although many social scientists would profess to share this belief it is nonetheless true that the study of human relationships has been one of the most neglected tasks in the history of the social sciences including psychology what heider found in the 1920s that most psychologists acknowledged the importance of studying human relationships but at the same time tended to focus their own research on more tractable topics such as memory and cognition is still very much evident in the 1980s even within the more specific domain of social psychology a majority of researchers still choose to address those hybrid topics social cognition social categorization and stereotyping person memory etc that relate most directly to traditional areas of psychological research still other researchers while choosing to study such important interpersonal phenomena as altruism aggression conflict and interpersonal attraction tend to focus so exclusively on these isolated and abstracted phenomena that they fail to provide a more inclusive view of the relationships in which these phenomena occur
