since 2007 the government of Ghana has been providing subsidized agricultural machines to private enterprises established as agricultural mechanization services enterprise centers amsec to scale up tractor hire services to smallholder farmers although farmer s demand for mechanization has increased in recent years most of this demand concentrates on land preparation plowing service using the firm investment model and recent data this paper quantitatively assesses whether amsec as a private enterprise is a viable business model attractive to private investors even though the intention of the government is to promote private sector led mechanization findings suggest that the amsec model is unlikely to be a profitable business model attractive to private investors even with the current level of subsidy the low tractor utilization rate as a result of low operational scale is the most important constraint to the intertemporal profitability of tractor hire services our findings further support the argument of pingali bigot and binswanger 1987 who indicated that mechanization service centers supported through government s heavy subsidy are not a policy option anywhere in the world even in the current situation in Ghana although the tractor rental service market is a proper way of mechanizing agriculture in a smallholder dominated agricultural economy such as Ghana this paper concludes that the development of such a market depends crucially on a number of factors including increased tractor use through migration across the two very different rainfall zones north and south increased tractor use through multiple tasks and use of low cost tractors the government can play an important role in facilitating the development of a tractor service market however the successful development of such a market depends on the incentive and innovation of the private sector including farmers who want to own tractors as part of their business portfolio traders who know how to bring in affordable tractors and expand the market and manufacturers in exporting countries who want to seek a long term potential market opportunity in Ghana and in other West African countries rising labor costs associated with increased rural to urban migration have compelled Ghanaian farmers to increase the use of tractors and other agricultural machines to conduct farming operations in the country diao et al 2014 the adoption of these mechanical technologies is consistent with the tendency among ghanaian farmers to save labor rather than embrace practices that create additional labor needs houssou et al 2016 tractor use is concentrated on plowing and other tillage operations primarily houssou et al 2013 but the supply of tractor services is inadequate earlier research estimated that plowing services represent 90 percent of the revenues of tractor service providers houssou et al 2013 both public and private supply of plowing services may have contributed to an expansion of the area under cultivation in ghana thereby exacerbating labor bottlenecks in post tillage field operations for many farmers
