an old irish fairy tale retold unveiling the deeper meaning once known but now lost a fun version for adults and children can enjoy brendan has always been told by his mother aislinn to avoid the river there is a fairy there that wants to have him badly and take him to her home in tir na nog one day he ventures close to the river and is taken to tir na nog he returns one week later to a changed world in this study which is first of all a folk lore study we pursue principally an anthropo psychological method of interpreting the celtic belief in fairies though we do not hesitate now and then to call in the aid of philology and we make good use of the evidence offered by mythologies religions metaphysics and physical sciences sometimes you think you want to disappear but all you really want is to be found paul alfred felt this way as he imagined his new life in ireland everything he could envision was real now deep within his soul was a door that opened into a world of wonder he only had to open the door and let the magic in to breathe it all in and love it all out he knew that ireland was full of magical things patiently waiting for his senses to grow sharper he knew there was something incredible waiting to be known he didn t want to live forever he just wanted to live it felt good to be lost in the right direction now ask yourself where will you be when you get where you re going
