presented as a successor to the cold war era book an introduction to strategic studies this volume explores issues of military security through a framework that links the issues of technology and world politics arguing that the technological aspect of the global strategic environment is partway through a centuries long process of transformation sped up by the advent of the information age the authors examine such issues as different levels of industrial development on security what they argue is the relative infrequency of the use of force between states the use of military threats such as mass destruction concepts that military means create problems in themselves such as fear of war and insecurity and finally ways in which regulatory schemes such as disarmament can be put to use to solve some of those problems paper edition unseen 22 50 annotation copyrighted by book news inc portland or

this book analyses the american way of war within the context of clausewitzian theory in doing so it draws conclusions about the origins viability and technical feasibility of america s current strategic approach the author argues that the situation in which america has found itself in iraq is the direct result of a culturally predisposed inclination to substitute technology for strategy this habit manifests most extremely in the form of the network centric warfare effects based operations ncw ebo construct which by and large has failed to deliver on its many promises this book argues that the fundamental problem with the ncw ebo and with us defence transformation generally is that it centres on technology at the expense of other dynamics notably the human one taking a fresh perspective on us strategic cultural predispositions in an era of persistent military conflict the author argues for the necessity of america s revising its strategic paradigm in favour of a more holistic brand of strategy this book will be of much interest to students of clausewitz strategic studies international security and us foreign policy
