forget me not explores the relationship between photography and memory and shows how ordinary people have sought to strengthen the emotional appeal of photographs primarily by embellishing them to create strange and often beautiful hybrid objects in this groundbreaking work ariella azoulay thoroughly revises our understanding of the ethical status of photography it must be understood in its inseparability from the many catastrophes of recent history she argues that photography is a particular set of relations between individuals and the powers that govern them and at the same time a form of relations among equals that constrains that power anyone even a stateless person who addresses others through photographs or occupies the position of a photograph's addressee is or can become a member of the citizenry of photography the crucial arguments of the book concern two groups that have been rendered invisible by their state of exception the palestinian noncitizens of israel and women in western societies azoulay's leading question is under what legal political or cultural conditions does it become possible to see and show disaster that befalls those with flawed citizenship in a state of exception the civil contract of photography is an essential work for anyone seeking to understand the disasters of recent history and the consequences of how they and their victims are represented this volume looks at the significance and range of ethical questions that pertain to various film practices diverse philosophical traditions provide useful frameworks to discuss spectators affective and emotional engagement with film which can function as a moral ground for one's connection to others and to the world outside the self these traditions encompass theories of emotion phenomenology the philosophy of compassion and analytic and continental ethical thinking and environmental ethics this anthology is one of the first volumes to open up a dialogue among these diverse methodologies contributors bring to the fore some of the assumptions implicitly shared between these theories and forge a new relationship between them in order to explore the moral engagement of the spectator and the ethical consequences of both producing and consuming films
