this book adopts a critical criminological approach to analyze the production, representation and role of crime in the emerging international order. It analyzes the role of power and its influence on the dynamics of criminalization at an international level, facilitating an examination of the geopolitics of international criminal justice. Such an approach to crime is well developed in domestic criminology; however, this critical approach is yet to be used to explore the relationship between power, crime and justice in an international setting. This book brings together contrasting opinions on how courts, prosecutors, judges, NGOs and other bodies act to reflexively produce the social reality of international justice. In doing this, it bridges the gaps between the fields of sociology, criminology, international relations, political science and international law to explore the problems and prospects of international criminal justice and illustrate the role of crime and criminalization in a complex, evolving and contested international society.

How is modern day thinking about crime different from that of previous centuries? What are the similarities and differences in attitudes and systems between the civil and common law societies of Europe and North America? These and other questions were addressed at an international conference on crime and criminal justice at the University of Calgary, attended by historians, professors of law, judges and criminologists. The essays in Part I consider the evolution of criminal law doctrine, and those in Part II analyse the theory and measurement of crime in the past and at present. Parts III and IV examine the courts and prosecution, and Part V assesses the historical roots of the insanity defence and the theory and practice of punishment. The volume will be of interest across national boundaries to historians, sociologists, social workers, lawyers and persons involved in the administration of justice, as well as the general reader concerned about civil rights, social values and justice. The eighteen contributors include F.H. Baker, J.M. Beattie, W.A. Calder, T.C. Curtis, D. Hay, H. Diederiks, A. Lachance, His Honour W.G. Morrow, A. Soman and S. Verdun Jones.

covering criminal justice history on a cross-national basis, this book surveys criminal justice in western civilization and American life chronologically from ancient times to the present. It is an introduction to the historical problems of crime, law enforcement and penology set against the background of major historical events and movements, integrating criminal justice history into the scope of European, British, French and American history.
