since the end of the cold war international migration has come to be seen as one of the most pressing issues facing europe in the 1990s this study takes as its starting point the growing concern among policy makers and the public throughout western europe over the issue of migration the author places the current migration debate within a comparative perspective in its global and historical context outlining current broad trends in economic migration and providing some pointers to how these trends have affected western europe in recent decades the analysis highlights elements of continuity and change in states involvement in the migration process a theme expanded in the context of the migration and migrant integration policies pursued by both sending and receiving states this provides a backdrop for a critical examination of current moves towards the harmonization of migration policy within the ec and wider groupings in western europe the author raises questions about possible future responses to the migration challenge and asks ultimately what is the nature of that challenge book jacket title summary field provided by blackwell north america inc all rights reserved international migration prospects and policies offers a comprehensive up to date survey of global patterns of international migration and the policies employed to manage the flows it shows that international migration is not rooted in poverty or rapid population growth but in the expansion and consolidation of global markets as nations are structurally transformed by their incorporation into global markets people are displaced from traditional livelihoods and become international migrants in seeking to work abroad they do not necessarily move to the closest or richest destination but to places already connected to their countries of origin socially economically and politically when they move migrants rely heavily on social networks created by earlier waves of immigrants and in recent years professional migration brokers have become increasingly common developing countries generally benefit from international migration because migrant savings and remittances provide foreign earnings to finance balance of payments deficits and make productive investments some developing nations have gone so far as to establish programs or ministries dedicated to the export of workers developed nations in contrast focus more on the social and economic costs of immigrants and seek to reduce their numbers regulate their characteristics and limit their access to social services over time receiving nations have gravitated toward a similar set of restrictive policies yielding undocumented migration as a worldwide phenomenon globalization also creates infrastructures of transportation communication and social networks to put developed societies within reach in the latter ageing populations and segmenting markets create a persistent demand for immigrant workers all these trends are likely to intensify in the coming years to make immigration policy a key political issue in the twenty first century
