the objective of the present edited book is to encompass studies from both developed and developing countries of asia africa europe and americas to understand and present a comparative scenario of the climate change and other environmental determinants of health and disease in geographically diversified countries environment and health perspective dates back to hippocrates treatise written 400 b c e in his book on airs waters and places hippocrates described diseases as associated with environmental conditions whoever wishes to investigate medicine properly should proceed thus in the first place to consider the seasons of the year and what effects each of them produces for they are not at all alike but differ much from themselves in regard to their changes then the winds the hot and the cold especially such as are common to all countries and then such as are peculiar to each locality we must also consider the qualities of the waters for as they differ from one another in taste and weight so also do they differ much in their qualities in the same manner when one comes into a city to which he is a stranger he ought to consider its situation how it lies as to the winds and the rising of the sun for its influence is not the same whether it lies to the north or the south to the rising or to the setting sun there has been a greater emphasis in the last four decades on understanding environmental factors which affect human health after united nations established intergovernmental panel on climate change ipcc in 1988 aimed at to evaluate research on changing environmental condition particularly climate change and its impacts on human wellbeing including human health as consequences of extreme heat waves conditions sea level rise forced migration air pollution droughts and wildfires from these studies risk levels of vulnerable populations and regions can be assessed and level of resilience of healthcare infrastructure that may be used in environmental health policy and equity of these countries esta obra estudia los malestares psicológicos y sociales que atraviesan las personas migrantes también reflexiona sobre el modo en que el personal de intervención puede apoyarlas y acompañarlas una vez llegan a la sociedad de acogida esta propuesta es una alternativa a la política habitual de muchos manuales que suelen responder en tales circunstancias con técnicas estandarizadas que dictan lo que se debe hacer frente a obedecer un protocolo este libro cultiva un espacio para que los profesionales aprendan a pensar antes de actuar y a escuchar aspectos inconscientes que frecuentemente pasan desapercibidos this book examines sex and gender differences in the causes and expression of medical conditions including mental health disorders sex differences are variations attributable to individual reproductive organs and the xx or xy chromosomal complement gender differences are variations that result from biological sex as well as individual self representation which include psychological behavioural and social consequences of an individual's perceived gender gender is still a neglected field in psychopathology and gender differences is often incorrectly used as a synonym of sex differences a reconsideration of the definition of gender as the term that subsumes masculinity and femininity could shed some light on this misperception and could have an effect in the study of health and disease this second edition of psychopathology clarifies the anthropological cultural and social aspects of gender and their impact on mental health disorders it focuses on gender perspective as a paradigm not only in psychopathology but also in mental health disorders as such it promotes open mindedness in the definition and perception of symptoms as well as assumptions about those symptoms and raises awareness of mental health there are notorious health inequalities in latin america and the caribbean a series of factors limit access to timely and quality medical care scarcity of human resources infrastructure facilities and medicine as well as low family incomes physical and cultural distance between supply provided by the public sector and the population requiring care income levels place of residence and ethnic origins are therefore variables that shape vulnerability and exclusion of millions of households throughout the region this situation is accompanied by changes in health demand structure stemming from the fast speed of population aging and urban growth especially in intermediate cities on the other hand increasing movement of people between countries especially in border areas poses the challenge of integrated strategies for epidemiological surveillance and healthcare this situation is exacerbated by the rising cost of medical care due among other reasons to the higher cost of health related technologies medicine and equipment and more commonplace chronic diseases because of the increasing number of older people this scenario implies important challenges for the development of state policies and strategies that must include decisions regarding the incorporation of information and communication technologies. The potential of these policies and strategies for reducing access limitations, improving efficiency in the health sector and in the quality of care and patient safety are some of the elements that must be considered in order to decidedly face the difficulties and resistance that other sectors have already tackled. Major changes and increasing improvements for ICTs as well as the breakneck development of bioengineering and technological convergence are changing the way we can work around the issue of health. The possible application of such technological innovation encompasses many if not all activities related to health care administration and education, offering opportunities to both increase coverage and improve the quality of care as well as health system effectiveness and efficiency. The concept of electronic health (e-health) is used herein to encompass the multiple potential applications of ICTs in this field regardless of whether they are aimed at health sector authorities, organizations providing care and health professionals or used as customized systems for patients and citizens in general. This concept includes applications ranging from electronic medical records and various types of telemedicine to health portals and hospital management systems among others. This basically refers to everything that uses ICTs in order to improve health actions in the sphere of prevention, diagnosis, treatment, monitoring and management. However, limited institutional progress has been made despite several electronic health initiatives being implemented throughout the region. Consequently, most of these projects have limited scope and are not properly integrated into health policies or national ICT strategies. This document starts by identifying and describing the several benefits expected as a result of incorporating ICTs in health and goes on to summarize present and future challenges for health policies especially inasmuch as the most vulnerable populations are concerned. Thirdly, the document showcases global progress made in several applications, strategies implemented and difficulties faced in some developed and Latin American countries. The document finishes with generic proposals for the formulation of policies and strategies to be considered and adapted by countries throughout the region.
